

Pran Pasteurized Milk

REGD. NO. DA 781 | VOL. XXVII No. 262 | ASHWIN 27, 1424 BS | MUHARRAM 21, 1439 HIRI

www.thedailystar.net

Your Right to Know

20 PAGES PLUS SHORT PRICE: Tk 12.00

The Daily Star

SECOND EDITION

WITH TODAY'S ISSUE

SAFE CONSTRUCTION

Key points from Sheltech-Star roundtable discussion

PAGE 11

MESSI'S DELIVERANCE

A brilliant hattrick by the Argentine star takes his side into World Cup

PAGE 15

New rice yields high hopes

Researchers expect BRRI dhan81 to be the most productive variety

REAZ AHMAD

Release of a new rice variety brings in high hopes as scientists expect it to break the long stagnation in the production growth of the staple.

Breeders at Bangladesh Rice Research Institute have developed the variety – BRRI dhan81 – whose per hectare output would be half a tonne more than BRRI dhan28, which is currently the most productive rice variety in the country.

There are 86 modern rice varieties in Bangladesh but the farmers plant BRRI dhan28 in an overwhelming 45 percent of the rice lands during the Boro season. Because of its high growth potential and huge acreage, scientists call BRRI dhan28 a mega variety.

Yesterday, the National Seed Board approved the new variety BRRI dhan81, which scientists hope would eventually replace BRRI dhan28 and increase the country's overall rice output significantly.

Against BRRI dhan28's per hectare yield of 6 tonnes, the BRRI dhan81 would give farmers an output of 6.5 tonnes and the rice will also be richer in protein (10.3 parts per million comparing to 8.6 ppm in BRRI dhan28). On average, Bangladesh consumers depend on rice for over 50 percent of their daily calorie and protein requirements.

It took 15 years for the scientists at Bangladesh Rice Research Institute (BRI) to come up with the new variety since Agriculture Minister Matia Chowdhury brought in some seeds of Amol-3 rice variety from Iran.

"We bred BRRI dhan81 through successful crosses between Iran's Amol-3 and our mega variety – BRRI dhan28. The process of crossing, lab and field tests continued for the past 15 years and finally the seed board

SEE PAGE 2 COL 5

Gone, like in a movie!

Man escapes from top custody thru' bathroom window

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Netrokona

Like a scene out of a watered-down version of the movie Shawshank Redemption, an accused of a murder case escaped from police custody at Purbodhola in Netrokona early yesterday.

The accused, Rubel Mia, who was arrested in connection with the murder of 25-year-old Kakon Mian, was supposed to be presented at court yesterday morning.

However, around 4:30am, he asked the police personnel guarding him to allow him to

SEE PAGE 10 COL 2

War crimes court reconstituted

Govt appoints chairman, two members for ICT-1 three months after tribunal became inoperative

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government yesterday reconstituted the International Crimes Tribunal-1 by appointing its chairman and two members after three months of stalemate in war crimes trial.

Justice Md Shahinur Islam, a High Court judge and member of the tribunal, has been appointed as the chairman of the tribunal.

Justice Amir Hossain, another HC judge, and Abu Ahmed Iomader, a retired district judge who is now on post-retirement leave (PRL), have been appointed as members.

The law ministry yesterday issued a gazette notification in this regard, Law Secretary ASSM Zahurul Haque Dulal told The Daily Star.

The tribunal reached an impasse since July 13 when its chairman, Justice Anwarul Haque, passed away. Another member Justice Md Shohrwardi was sent back to the HC.

Justice Shahinur

SEE PAGE 10 COL 1

A Rohingya child uses a bowl to shelter himself from the scorching sun at the Palangkhal refugee camp in Ukha of Cox's Bazar yesterday.

PHOTO: AFP

UN's Bosnia promise 'Systematic bid' to forgotten in Myanmar expel Rohingyas

New UN report says Rakhine army operation meant to prevent the Muslim minority from returning military offensive against the Serbs. Nations which did not commit any troops wanted military intervention. In the end, no action was taken and Srebrenica happened.

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

The events in the heart of Europe shook many a conscience. UN Secretary General Kofi Annan in a report concluded "the tragedy of Srebrenica will haunt our history forever".

And at the opening session of 1999 General Assembly, he showed his resolve when he said that national borders would no longer protect leaders who abuse people under their control.

Eight years down the line and six years after the butcher of Serbia Slobodan Milosevic was arrested by the Yugoslav authorities for genocide, the International Court of Justice issued an important judgement in the case of Bosnia and Herzegovina versus Serbia and Montenegro.

The court echoed what Kofi Annan had said and announced that the obligation to prevent genocide cannot be

SEE PAGE 2 COL 1

Myanmar's army is involved in a "systematic" effort to rid the country of Rohingyas and has torched homes, crops, villages of the minority community to prevent them from returning, the UN has said.

In a report by a team from the UN Human Rights Office, it said "clearance operations" had begun before the insurgent attacked on police posts on August 25 and it included killings, torture, rape of children, and attacks on places of worship.

The UN team, which interviewed 65 Rohingyas in Cox's Bazar between September 14 and September 24, stated that Myanmar security forces often in concert with armed Rakhine Buddhist individuals committed human rights violations against the Rohingyas and caused over 5 lakh of them to leave the Rakhine state.

"Brutal attacks against the Rohingyas in northern Rakhine state have been well-organised, coordinated and systematic, with the intent of not only driving the population out of Myanmar but preventing them from returning to their homes," read the report released in Geneva yesterday.

SEE PAGE 2 COL 1

People, oblivious to or careless about air pollution, burn garbage on Shyamoli Ring Road in the capital late at night. Many do this across the capital. The photo was taken recently.

PHOTO: RASHED SHUMON

The gritty girls

Six schoolgirls honoured for their fight against child marriage

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Shabana Akhter was a student of class eight when her father arranged her marriage with a complete stranger, but she could not let anyone mess with her childhood and education.

At first, she tried to stop it through talks with her parents, informing them of negative consequences of early marriage but in vain. Upset, yet determined to pursue her studies, she came up with a unique idea to foil the marriage.

"I shaved off my hair and appeared with my bald head when the suitor and his family came to see me. The marriage did not take place," said Shabana, of Gangachar in Rangpur, while sharing the story of her fight against her own early marriage before the audience at a programme at Krishnibid Institution Bangladesh in the capital yesterday.

SEE PAGE 2 COL 2

IN THE SHADOW OF VIOLENCE

Approaching the persecution of the Rohingyas from various aspects, Star Weekend is bringing out its special 64-page magazine tomorrow with articles by renowned scholars from home and abroad.

We cover the crisis from historical, economic and political perspectives, as well as look at the gaps in the way we have dealt with Rohingyas refugees thus far and suggest ways forward.

Make sure you get a copy of this collector's item
FREE OF CHARGE
from your hawkers.

BULL

Metal

Contact 01713-164207

The Metal (Pvt.) Limited