CHITTAGONG PORT Businesses fear prolonged congestion

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

The Chittagong port urgently needs an action plan to enhance its efficiency, otherwise the congestion there will prolong for another three or more years, feared port users.

They made the remark at a views exchange meeting on "Expediting the Country's Import and Export Trade", organised by Chittagong Port Authority (CPA) at Chittagong Port Training Academy yesterday.

Speaking as the chief guest, Abul Kalam Azad -- principal coordinator for sustainable development goals (SDG) affairs at the Prime Minister's Office -- urged all stakeholders to submit their recommendations to enhance the port's efficiency before the port authority in two weeks.

A three-member committee comprising representatives from the Chittagong Port Authority, Chittagong Customs House and another from the port users would then put the recommendations in order and send those to the ministry by three weeks, said Azad.

He also advised the secretary to the shipping ministry to formulate an action plan based on the recommendations.

Several business representatives during the meeting anticipated a prolonged congestion at the port for the next three years or more unless the authorities build new jetties and terminals there.

Speaking about the delays in unloading cargo at the port, Chittagong Chamber of Commerce and Industry (CCCI) President Mahbul Alam said now it takes about one and a half months to unload a cargo vessel, resulting in nearly US$ 1,00,000 in demurrages.

Aameer Alihussain, managing director of BSRM, said, "Failing to get berth at the port jetties, we are now unloading goods from mother vessels onto lighter vessels." But the lighter vessels also have to wait for a long period due to the

to the Rohingya crisis.

The Speaker also said the delegates will raise the issue within their countries as well as at the global forums to mount pressure on Myanmar for taking back their citizens.

Bangladesh as a host country has been continuing its diplomatic efforts bilaterally and multilaterally for a peaceful and durable solution, she added.

"I hope the Rohingya issue will be solved in line with the five-point proposal of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina that she placed at the 72nd United Nations General Assembly."

The Speaker said majority of the delegates will arrive today to attend the programme.

Decentralise power

If need be, a mayor has to do some unpopular jobs in the public interest. For example, the urban renewal programme during my tenure was challenging, but once it was done, people were happy. Even my opponents turned into my supporters and they re-elected me.

It is very important to empower the mayors so that the central government can focus on more important issues like the overall economy of the country, foreign policy, defence, etc.

I, as the mayor, came up with a roadmap. We first consulted the local people on the city development strategy and we drew up the roadmap that our city would be built as an economic centre by 2015.

We invited all the stakeholders. And we asked our people what they foresaw our city to be like in the next 15 years. We invited everybody to make it inclusive. After we got all the inputs, we heard from professional groups -- urban planners and marine biologists -- to draw up the plan.

We had specific schemes and targets to convince the finance companies. Ninety-five percent of the projects and programmes have been accomplished. It was the people's vision, I was merely a facilitator.

There are challenges, but a leader has to remain consistent. Consult with the people on city planning.

We have a local planning office under the mayor's office to make the master plan. All local government bodies have to have a planning office. Besides, local government authorities have the power to hire professional consultancy firms to help draw up the plan.

There is an authority called Water District, independent of local government, to take care of clean water supply and sewerage system.

There is also a local development council, one-fourth of which is comprised of [members from] the private sector. It even includes fishermen, small vendors, teachers, academics and professionals to ensure that the interest of one individual does not end up as the deciding factor in decision making.

I focused on development and not much on politics. Sell the prospect of your city to investors and connect with other cities for trade and business.

Earlier, it took months for a businessman to get a permit. We installed a system to issue a business permit in 30 minutes. It used to require 22 officials to sign a business permit -- taking months altogether. We brought it down to only two -- sitting in one office under camera surveillance and with no drawers underneath their tables.

While the Philippines national police are under the central government, there is a Peace and Order Council, chaired by the mayor. If there is a law and order issue, the mayor can complain. To discipline an erring police officer, the mayor can set up a people's law enforcement board where ordinary people are the members.

This is a forum where people can complain about a police officer abusing his or her power.

We put emphasis on the bankability, liveability, fast track investment, transparency and good governance in our city. Good governance is very important. Leading a city in a participatory manner and making the process inclusive is good governance.

Correction

A report headlined "Kurigram journo held under Section 57 gets bail", which was published yesterday, mistakenly mentioned that the journalist concerned was granted bail. Actually the journalist did not get bail yet, only his bail prayer was accepted by a local court. Also the court set November 9 for hearing the bail prayer. We regret the error.
