Reopen Lakehead school in 24 hours: HC

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The High Court yesterday ordered the authorities concerned to reopen Lakehead Grammar School within 24 hours.

It also declared the government's decision to shut down the school's Dhanmondi and Gulshan branches in Dhaka illegal. The school was shut down by the government on charges of its affiliations with militancy and extremism.

The HC, however, directed the school authorities to cooperate with investigators if allegations of militancy and extremism are raised against the institution in future.

The bench of Justice Syed Muhammad Dastagir Husain and Justice Md Ataur Rahman Khan delivered the verdict following three separate writ petitions filed by Khaled Hassan Matin, the proprietor of the school, and guardians of 12 students challenging the legality of the government decision.

Attorney General Mahubey Alam said the government will challenge the HC verdict by moving an appeal before the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

On November 7, the Dhaka district administration sealed off Dhanmondi and Gulshan branches of Lakehead Grammar School and shut down all activities of the school, based on allegations that it was patronising militancy, promoting extremist views and providing support in the formation of militant outfits.

The school was co-founded in 2000 by Rizwan Haroon, dubbed as a top militant in some media reports, and Jenifer Ahmed, wife of alleged Hizb ut-Tahrir coordinator Ad Dhaka University teacher Syed Golam Mowla.

Though "listed as a militant suspect by the home ministry", Rizwan

No one is immune from prosecution for crimes

Observes HC while delivering verdict on SC letter to ACC

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The High Court yesterday made seven observations over the Supreme Court administration's letter to the Anti Corruption Commission (ACC) about retired Appellate Division judge Md Joynul Abedin, saying that the SC letter has tarnished the image of the highest court.

The HC in its observation also said that the letter tends to give an impression that a retired judge of the Supreme Court is immune from criminal prosecution. But in fact, irrespective of a person being in service or not, no one, not even the president, is immune from prosecution.

The SC letter to the ACC had said it would not be appropriate for the ACC to take action against Justice Joynul who went on retirement on December 31, 2009.

The bench of Justice M Enayetur Rahim and Justice Shahidul Karim made the observations while delivering a verdict on the rule issued over the legality of the SC administration's letter to the ACC about Justice Joynul Abedin.

"The impugned letter has impaired as well as tarnished the image and dignity of the highest court of the country in the estimation of the public at large," the HC observed.

The HC in the observation said that the letter is amenable to judicial review as it was issued by the office of the Appellate Division under its administrative capacity and therefore the rule is quiet maintainable.

After the delivery of the verdict, ACC lawyer Advocate Khurshid Alam Khan told The Daily Star that the SC administration's letter to the ACC about Joynul Abedin is illegal as per the HC observations and there is no legal bar for the commission to continue the inquiry process.

On March 2 this year, the anti-graft watchdog, as part of its enquiry into Justice Joynul's wealth, asked SC registrar general's office to provide documents related to his salary as well as relevant benefits and services that the SC used to provide him.

In a response to ACC's query, on March 28, the SC administration sent the letter,

Form independent commission

To investigate 'enforced disappearance', demands ASK; journos submit memo to home ministry to find missing journo Utpal within 72 hours

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Rights body Ain o Salish Kendra (ASK) yesterday demanded formation of an independent commission to investigate all incidents of alleged enforced disappearance with transparency and accountability.

"Without denying incidents of enforced disappearance, the state should investigate all such incidents through an independent commission... to establish the rule of law," it said in a statement.

It also stressed the need for the state's strong role in stopping such acts saying that in a democratic state the culture of impunity cannot continue.

The demands came at a time when at least 10 people, including a university teacher, a book importer, a journalist, businessmen, a student and political leaders went missing or were abducted since August 22.

Signed by ASK Executive Director Sheeba Hafiza, the statement said in most of the cases, it is alleged that the law enforcement agencies or people impersonating security forces picked up the victims. However, the law enforcement agencies always denied the allegations.

"Some of the missing or abducted persons were later shown arrested and sent to court while many of them are still traceless," said the statement. A few bodies, bearing injury marks, of the missing or abducted people were also recovered, it added.

"Enforced disappearance is still being termed as abduction, disregarding the involvement of the state," the statement added. "Such a crime is an extreme violation of human rights and considered a transnational crime."

The state has the responsibility to ensure safety of its citizens and punishing those responsible for enforced disappearances, it further said.

The latest victim of the incident of disappearance is Tanvir Yasin Karim, owner of Karim International and Darus Salam Publications. He was picked up by plainclothes men on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, North South University teacher Mubashar Hasan went missing on November 7 and journalist Utpal Das has remained untraced since October 10.

Mithun Chowdhury, president of newly-formed Bangladesh Janata Party, and his associate Ashit Ghosh were picked up allegedly by law enforcers in the capital's Sutrapur area on October 27.

Those who went missing or were abducted in just four days in August are -- businessman Aniruddha Kumar Roy, Mgcill University student Ishrak Ahmed Fahim, Bangladesh Kalyan Party Secretary General MM Aminur
