Gal Gadot stands against alleged sex offender Brett Ratner

More and more cases of sexual misconduct are on the rise in Hollywood. A recent one involved a number of women actors and singers claiming the producer-director Brett Ratner of being a sexual offender. Gal Gadot seems to have backed up this claim, taking a firm stand that if Brett Ratner was not removed from the production of the Wonder Woman sequel, Gadot herself would not be a part of the movie. Ratner's production company RatPac-Dune Entertainment co-produced Wonder Woman alongside Warner Bros, and neither Ratner nor Warner Bros has said anything about these allegations yet. Despite no official confirmation, Gal Gadot stated during an interview on NBC's Today talk-show that Brett Ratner will indeed not be a part of the Wonder Woman sequel. "There are so many people involved in making this movie, and they all shared the same sentiments," said Gadot, "Everything knew what the right thing to do was."
