

16TH AMENDMENT VERDICT

Review petition in next 28 days: AG

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The government will file a petition with the Supreme Court in the next 28 days seeking review of its verdict scrapping the 16th amendment to the constitution that had empowered parliament to remove SC judges for incapacity or misconduct, said Attorney General Mahbubey Alam yesterday.

He told The Daily Star that his office had collected the certified copy of the apex court judgement on November 26 for submitting the review petition.

"According to the Supreme Court rules, the review petition has to be filed within 30 days from the date of receiving the certified copy ... we will file the review petition within this period of time," he said.

The attorney general said his office has finalised the draft of the grounds on which the SC may consider the review petition, but the grounds might be recast through scrutiny and examination.

Mahbubey Alam earlier told this correspondent that the government in the petition would pray to the apex court to restore parliament's power to remove SC judges.

In the full verdict released on August 1, the apex court said the provision of Supreme Judicial Council for the removal of SC judges for misconduct or incapacity has been reinstated in the constitution. An 11-member committee, led by the attorney general, was formed in October for filing the review petition.

The SC's dismissal of the 16th amendment to the constitution has been a much talked-about topic among politicians from the ruling party as the SC in its full verdict made some observations, which were critical of the country's present political culture.

The Awami League cannot be ousted from power forcibly, said its General Secretary Obaidul Quader yesterday.

Road safety recommendations remain unfulfilled

Zaglul Ahmed Chowdhury's third death anniversary today

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Three years have gone by since distinguished journalist and columnist Zaglul Ahmed Chowdhury was killed in a road accident at the Karwan Bazar intersection, but little has been done to make the intersection safe for pedestrians and commuters alike.

Former chief editor and managing director of the state-run Bangladesh Sangbad Sangstha (BSS) was going to the ATN Bangla office in Karwan Bazar on a bus to join a talk show on November 29, 2014. As he was getting off the bus, it recklessly pulled away before he could disembark safely.

Following a public outrage, the government then formed a five-member probe committee that made a 15-point recommendation, including ensuring adequate bus stops and strict monitoring of traffic by law enforcers.

Anything is possible

First state-funded school student wins prestigious Eton debate competition in UK

CITY DESK

Born and raised in an impoverished area in East London in the UK, and student of a public school, 16-year-old Selina Begum has stunned the world by winning the individual prize at Eton Autumn Invitational debating competition.

Selina is the first state-funded school student who won the prestigious competition held this month at Eton College, beating 200 other students from top private schools including Winchester College, Westminster College and Eton College, said a press release yesterday.

An A-level student at Newham Collegiate Sixth Form Centre (NCS), Selina lives in an East End council flat with her parents who barely speak English and immigrated to the UK from Bangladesh in the 90s.

Selina beat her competitors in motion debates on junk food and rights to privacy. She also gave a speech on Islamophobia.

Mentioning that she felt like a fish out of water when she arrived at Eton, Selina said, "I didn't know what to expect when I arrived at Eton. I thought there'd be some social stigma being the only Muslim state school pupil competing, but there wasn't."

Regarding the other competitors from well-off backgrounds, she said, "They may have come from far more privileged backgrounds than mine, but they were all as scared as I was. What struck me most was how alike we all were. No one looked down on me, we all encouraged each other. It was a wonderful experience."

The incident is being investigated by the Criminal Investigation Department (CID).

SUICIDE ATTACK AT CTG COURT

Twelve years gone, trial still unfinished

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

Twelve years have passed, but the trial of a murder case filed over a suicide bomb attack on the Chittagong court premises is yet to be finished.

On this day in 2005, JMB carried out the attack, killing two people, including a police constable and injuring 16 others.

Following the attack, a murder and explosive cases were filed with Kotwali Police Station.

Court sources said only 28 witnesses out of 77 have testified in last 12 years. Even the investigation officer of the murder case is yet to testify.

Currently, the murder case is under trial at Speedy Trial Tribunal in Chittagong.

Special Public Prosecutor Mohammed Ayub Khan of the tribunal yesterday told The Daily Star that no deposition of the witnesses was recorded as the post of the tribunal's judge has been vacant for nine months this year.

Besides, the number of witnesses was increased without any ground, causing the delay as well, said PP Ayub.

In the murder case, detectives submitted a charge sheet to the court, accusing five leaders of the banned Islamist outfit on May 18, 2006.

A Chittagong court framed charges against them on April 16, 2007.

Three of the accused were hanged to death in another case.

Among the remaining two accused in the murder case, Javed Iqbal alias Mohammed alias Hurrar, is in jail while JMB bomb expert Jahedul Islam Sumon alias Borna Mizan is on the run.
