HC clears way for resumption of Sylhet Dak

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The High Court yesterday cleared the way for the authorities concerned to resume running publication of the Sylhet Dak, a daily published from Sylhet.

The court stayed the government's decision to cancel the declaration of the daily owned by industrialist Ragib Ali and his son Abdul Hye.

Sylhet district administration cancelled the declaration on June 15 this year as its publisher Ragib Ali and Abdul Hye were found guilty of forging legal documents for grabbing an endowed property in Sylhet and sentenced to six years' imprisonment.

Yesterday, the HC bench of Justice Syed Muhammad Dastagir Husain and Justice Md Ataur Rahman Khan stayed the cancellation of the declaration of the daily, launched in 1984, following a writ petition filed by Ragib Ali.

Ragib Ali's lawyer AM Aminuddin told The Daily Star that there is no legal bar for his client to run the publication of Sylhet Dak following the HC order.

Poor execution of plans behind unplanned Dhaka

Prof Jamilur tells Smart City campaign event

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Dhaka remains an unplanned city despite having some notable urbanisation and transportation plans, thanks to poor implementation of the plans, said noted civil engineer Prof Jamilur Reza Choudhury.

Within three days of publication of Dhaka's detailed area plan (DAP) in June 2010 in official gazette, it was subjected to a further review by a seven-member ministerial body virtually holding back its actual implementation, he said.

Meanwhile, most of the conservable flood flow zones earmarked in the DAP were filled up to give way for real estate developers and others leading to a frequent inundation of Dhaka city even in normal monsoon rain, said Prof Jamilur at the inauguration of a week-long Smart City campaign in the capital yesterday.

United Nations Development Programme and the Access to Information (a2i) programme of the Prime Minister's Office jointly organised the event at Bangabandhu Novo Theatre with an aim to build awareness about smart city ideas.

Agricultural land has been destroyed in the same fashion, he said.

The Strategic Transport Plan for greater Dhaka city put emphasis on pedestrian-friendly transportation system, but nothing has so far been done to that end, said Prof Jamilur, who led the technical body for both urbanisation and transportation plans.

Kabir Bin Anwar, project director of a2i programme, said it was true that there were plenty of plans and laws for planned urbanisation, but those were not properly implemented.

He said the government is working on a four-lane circular road in Dhaka city, and a high-powered committee was working on to prepare a master plan on saving the four Dhaka rivers.

Selina Hayat Ivy, mayor of Narayanganj City Corporation, said a lack of coordination among various government departments despite a cabinet division circular, was the foremost barrier to an effective functioning of an elected mayor. She demanded that public land be handed over to city corporations and municipalities for turning those into green and open spaces.

Charlotta Schlyter, ambassador of Sweden, said good governance and fighting corruption are the keys to building smart cities.

Citing that some features of a smart city are inclusiveness, cycling, water conservation, good air quality, emergency services and waste management, she said Sweden turns 99 percent of waste into energy and her country would remain beside Bangladesh in such endeavour.

Among other events, the campaign week holds a three-day display of innovative ideas by government and private organisations for a smart city at the Novo Theatre.

A total of 66 government and private organisations including 36 municipalities are showcasing their ideas on city plan, transport, low cost housing, green building, waste management, urban poverty reduction, water for all, public toilet, pollution control, disaster management, ICT and public space.

HM Ahidul Islam, mayor of Kotlipara municipality and secretary general of Municipal Association of Bangladesh; and Sudipto Mukerjee, country director of UNDP Bangladesh, also spoke.

They surrendered to the deputy inspector general of police (DIG), Barisal range at a programme arranged by the district police at Barisal Police Lines around noon.

Md Shafiqul Islam, DIG of Barisal range, also distributed 58 sewing machines among them.

The DIG said they introduced the programme to rehabilitate the addicts and peddlers through employment and other support. "We'll also arrange monitoring programmes for them..."

Zaglul remembered fondly

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The way Zaglul Ahmed Chowdhury pursued journalism for over four decades is inspiring for journalists, speakers told a commemorative meeting yesterday.

They said the untimely death of an honest, ever-smiling and multi-faceted personality is an irreparable loss to the country.

Marking his third death anniversary, Journalist Zaglul Ahmed Chowdhury Memorial Trust organised the event at Jatiya Press Club, attended by ministers, senior journalists, friends and family members.

Speaking as the chief guest, Commerce Minister Tofail Ahmed said Zaglul was an amicable and modest person. "He respected all. Journalist like Zaglul is rare nowadays," he said.

"Zaglul is the brightest star in the journalism arena. He will be remembered for ages."

The minister said Zaglul started journalism during his student life and pursued the profession with sincerity until his last breath.

Zaglul, former chief editor and managing director of the state-run Bangladesh Sangbad Sangstha (BSS), was killed in a road accident on way to ATN Bangla office in Karwan Bazar on a bus to join a talk show on November 29, 2014.

As he was getting off the bus, it recklessly pulled away before he could disembark safely.

Following a public outrage over the killing, the government then formed a five-member probe committee that made a 15-point recommendation, including ensuring adequate bus stops and strict monitoring of traffic by law enforcers. No recommendations were implemented yet.

Food Minister Qamrul Islam, who was a friend of the journalist since the second grade in 1956, said, "I feel bad when I think that Zaglul is no more... we grew up together, studied and played together."

He said the trust fund will award two journalists every year as a tribute to Zaglul.

parents identified her from photograph three days later.

Shamsunnahar, Shajahan's wife, said, "After seeing the news on Facebook about the barbaric gang rape and killing of Rupa on a running bus, my husband started losing sleep at night."

"My husband has fatherly adoration for girls as we don't have any daughter. He was crying and feeling unbearable pain, picturing Rupa as our own daughter," she said, adding, "At one point, I told him that to relieve his pain, he should do something to protest the brutality committed against the girl."

"I used to run six kilometres everyday for health reasons. But, after the gruesome rape and murder of Rupa, I put on an extra four kilometres as an expression to protest violence against women," Shajahan humbly said.

Dismissing concern for his health due to age, the determined father said, "If my physical condition doesn't allow running 10 kilometres, I'll ride a bicycle for the same distance. If I'm unable to do that, I'll move on a wheel-chair."

Advocate Ataur Rahman Azad, general secretary of Tangail district unit of Bangladesh Manobadhikar Bastobayan Sangstha, said, "Mirza Shajahan's protest is unique and his message against repression and violation against women is swiftly gaining overwhelming support among people."

Yesterday, five transport workers were indicted for killing Rupa from Tarash upazila in Sirajganj.
