

Pregnant woman found dead by the road

OUR CORRESPONDENT, N'ganj

A six-month pregnant woman was found dead beside a road near her west Jalkuri residence at Siddhirganj in Narayanganj yesterday.

Police recovered the body of Asma Begum, 30, wife of Sarwar Hosain of Barisal, and sent it to Narayanganj General Hospital morgue for an autopsy.

Police detained Sarwar, a day labourer and his three co-workers.

Sarwar found the door of the house, where the couple had been living for last seven months, locked from outside when he returned from work on Friday night, said police, quoting Sarwar.

The next morning, locals found Asma's body.

The body bore some injury marks on the face and neck, said police.

Sarwar might have strangled Asma over a family feud, suspected police.

107 Hindus killed in 2017

Says Bangladesh Jatiya Hindu Mohajote

UNB, Dhaka

At least 107 Hindus were killed and 31 became victims of enforced disappearance in 2017 – higher than previous year's, said Bangladesh Jatiya Hindu Mohajote (BJHM) yesterday.

Polash Kanti Dey, general secretary of BJHM, an alliance of Hindu organisations, came up with the statistics while revealing a report titled, "Atrocities on Religious Minorities in Bangladesh from January 1 to December 31 of 2017", at a press conference at Dhaka Reporters' Unity. The report said 782 Hindus were either forced to leave the country or threatened to leave. Besides, 23 were forced to convert.

Polash said at least 25 Hindu women and children were raped while 235 temples and statues were vandalised. The number of atrocities on the Hindu community in 2017 is 6,474. The number was 11,335 in 2016.

BJHM President Prabhas Chandra Ray said though the number has declined because of the efforts of government, BJHM and Hindu society, incidents of killing and forced disappearance are still alarming. He expressed hope that the number of atrocities on the minorities will come down to zero soon with government efforts.

Care is available in few hospitals like Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujib Medical University and Dhaka Medical College Hospital in Bangladesh at present.

For a larger implementation, the government has to take an initiative as it is not possible for the private organisations to do it alone, he said.

Dr Moarrar Hossain, director of National Institute for Cancer Research and Hospital, said 30 percent of the cancer patients, they have provided treatment to, could get cured.

The remaining 70 percent who suffered for a long time are considered as a burden on the family and society, he said, highlighting the importance of palliative care.

Praising the initiative of the roundtable, noted entrepreneur Rokia Afzal Rahman said, "At the end of the day, I feel I have to contribute to the society that has given me the opportunity to build myself."

"Today, I am here to commit myself to be with you," she told the roundtable.

Speaking as the chief guest, Deputy Speaker of the Jatiya Sangsad Advocate Fazle Rabbi Miah said he would take steps to bring success to the initiative. He stressed the need for arranging awareness programmes on palliative care in different divisions.

Bushra Alam, senior health specialist of the World Bank in Bangladesh, suggested engaging the youth in building awareness on palliative care.

Prof MA Khan, head of Hematology, DMCH; Nusrat Aman, chief patron of ASDC; Sathyanarayanan Doraiswamy, chief of Health Programmes, UNFPA Bangladesh; Prof Judy Beal, dean, Simmons College of Nursing, Boston, USA, and Arif Mahmud, director, Medical Services, Apollo Hospitals, also spoke.

project completion period between January 2015 and December 2018. "But three-fourth of the total time was lost in red-tapism well before start of the project," said an official. Finally, he said, Titas started installing meters on September 17 last year, but faced problems shortly afterwards.

Officials said when Titas started the installation work, it found many of its service lines are faulty. It also found the lines connected to gas ovens are leaked. Some 13,174 meters were installed until December 26, 2017. The plan was to install 23,000.

Titas Gas Prepaid Meter Project Director Fazlur Rahman admitted the problems and said they have sent letters to the consumers concerned asking them to fix the leaks with the help of Titas. "But the response is very poor. Some 400 letters were sent but we've received very little response."

Moreover, the Titas-appointed contractor's inadequate manpower has contributed to the delay. "Toyokeiki Co Ltd, the selected contractor, was asked to increase its manpower, but they look reluctant. It caused further delay in the work," a Titas official said preferring anonymity. Besides, allegation runs rife that local sub-contractors are taking additional money from consumers if any leak is found in their gas connections during the meter installation.

Over the project's slow progress, State Minister for Power and Energy Nasrul Hamid said he is not very happy with the Energy Division's performance.
