

What is time?

If you're in Dhaka and you don't have the magical powers to take the wrong side of the road/shut down traffic movement, should the concept of time apply to you? Because on any random day, a 20-minute commute might take 120. The wise folks who recommend walking need to be reminded that on certain roads, functional footpaths don't exist [because reconstruction/development]. Let's not even get into the rampant air pollution that's going to wreak havoc on your lungs and heart.

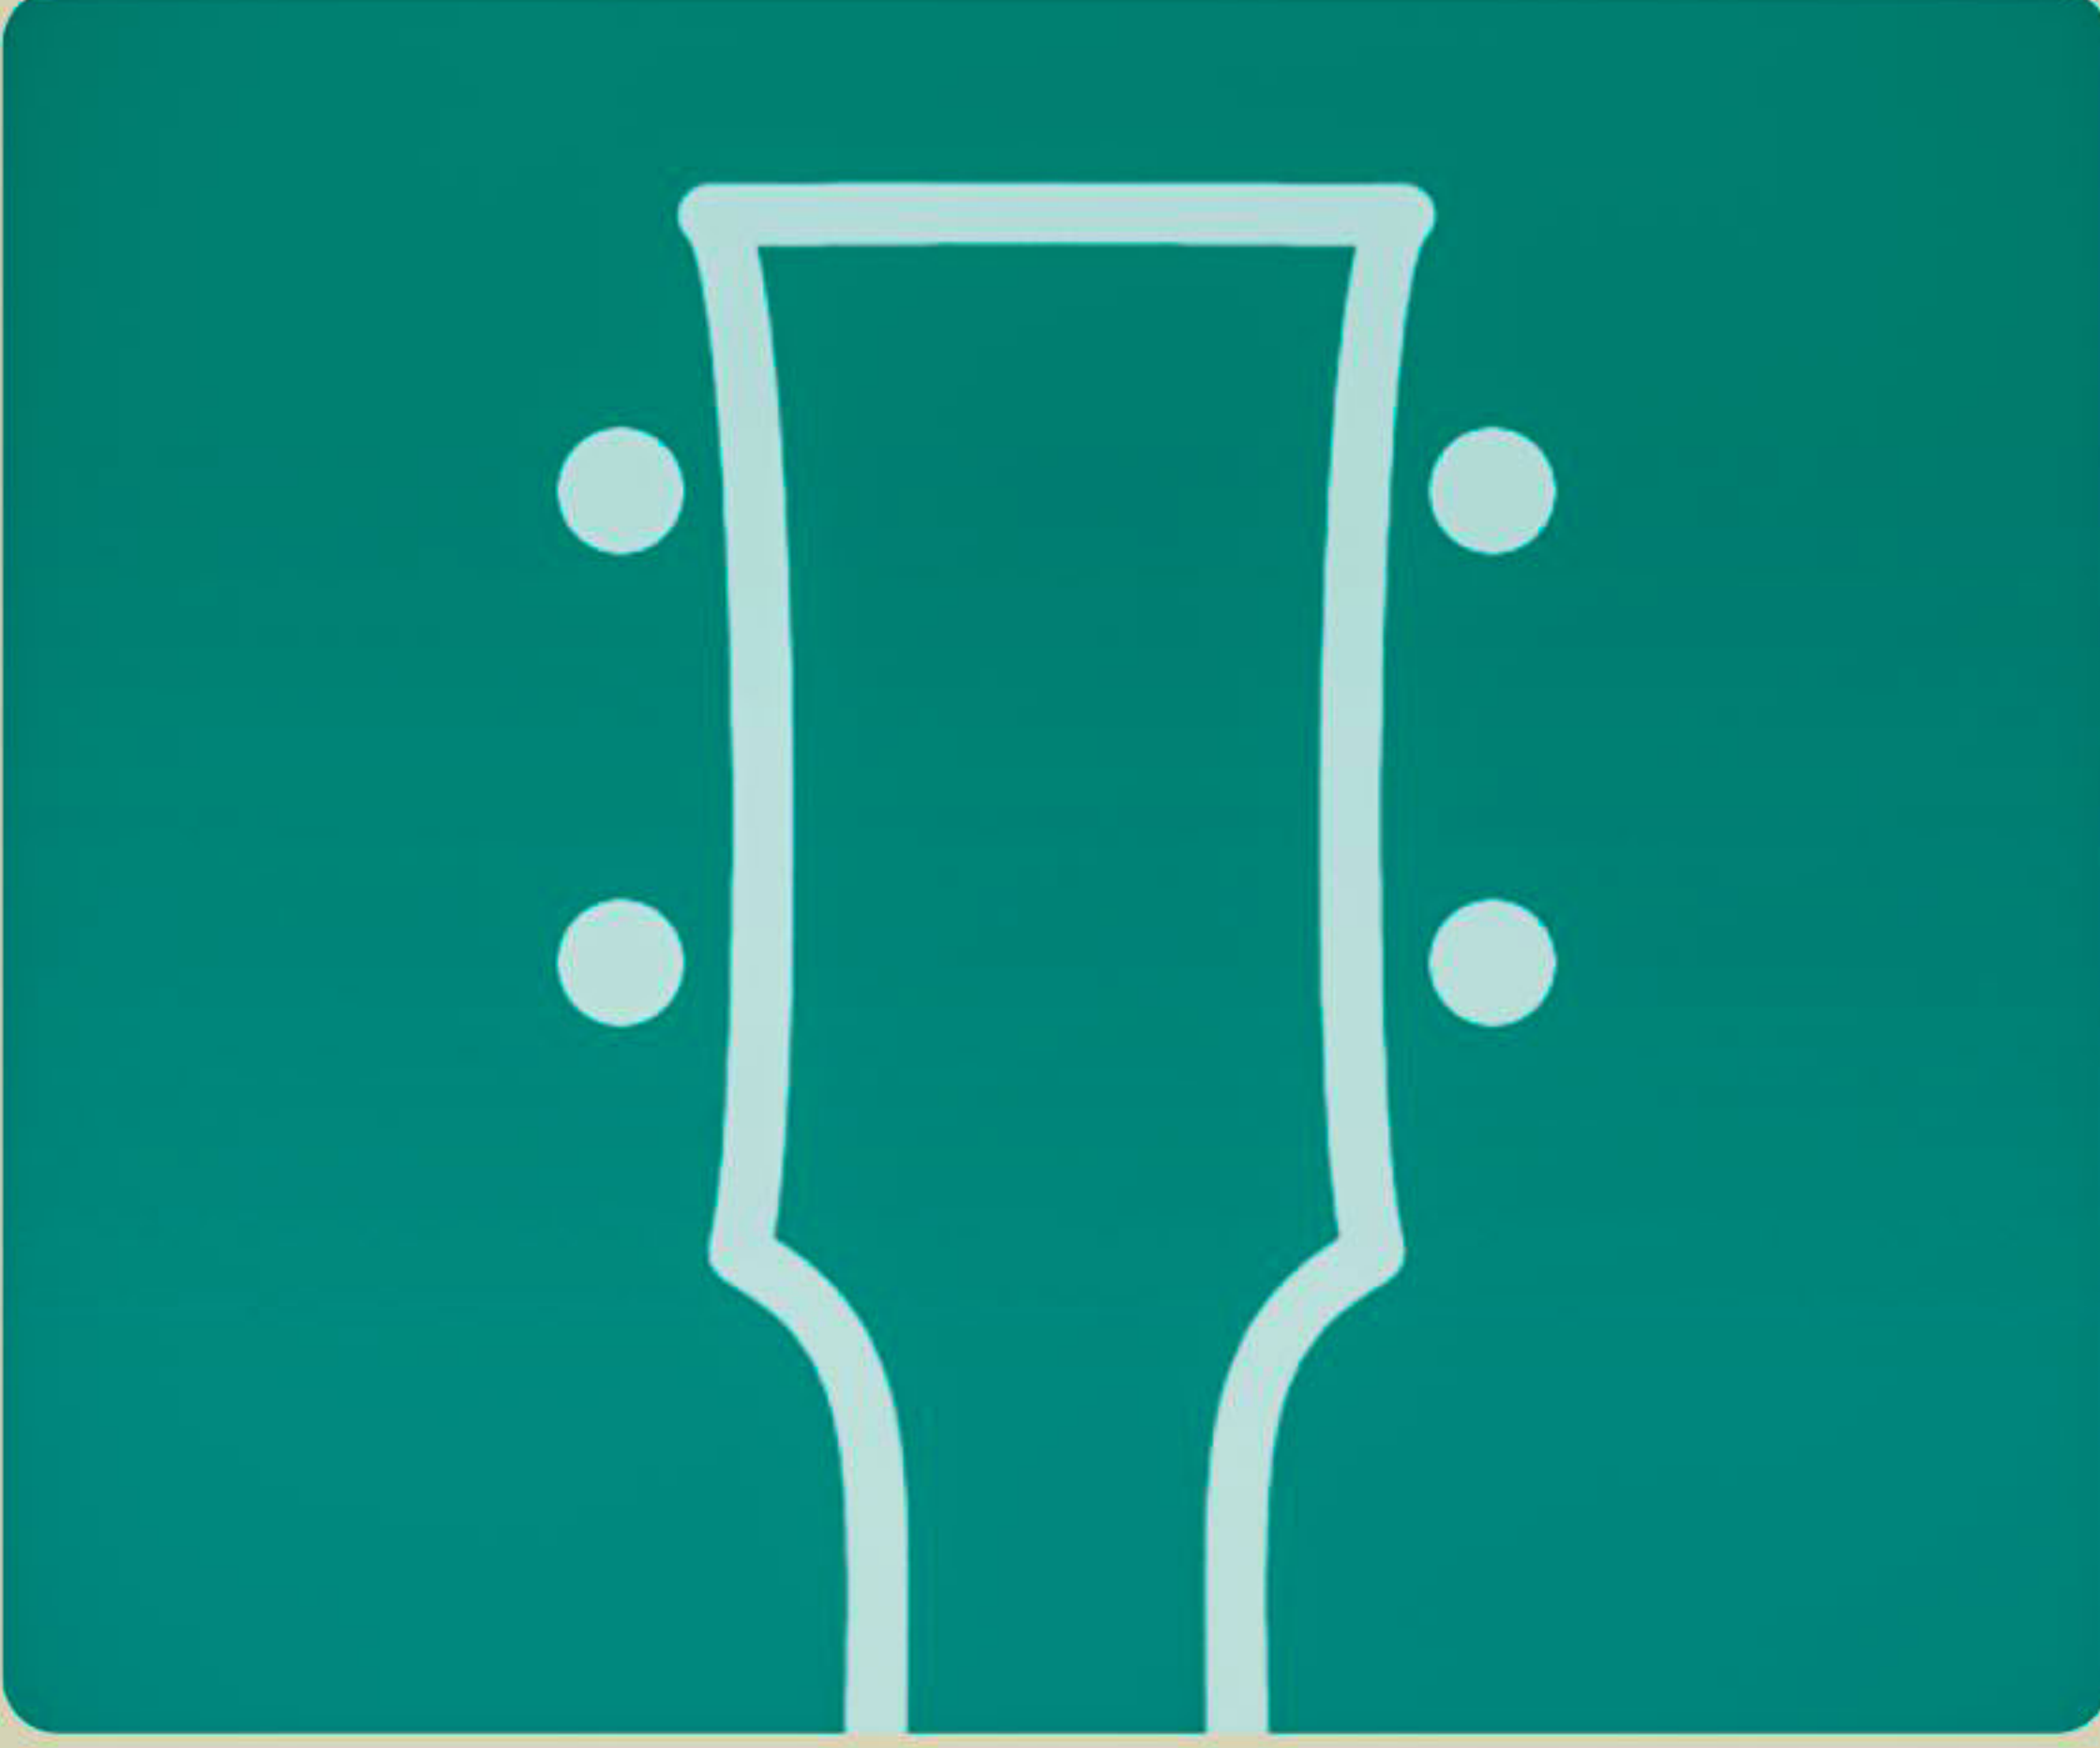

Coming back to time – it should be declared an obsolete concept for normie Dhakaites, so that when your teacher or boss asks you why you were not on time, you can look them in the eye and say, “Am I? What is this time you speak of?”

APP REVIEW

TUNE YOUR UKULELE

MOHUA MOULI

Platform: Android

Tired of seeing your guitarist friends show off their guitar tuning apps? Are you new at this musical instrument business and don't know how to tune your four-string hipster magnet? Well, fear no more – now you can tune your shiny new ukulele without even knowing how to play any chords.

The “Ukulele Tuner” app is equipped with top-notch codes that can tell how out of tune your ukulele strings are. As you turn the screws of your ukulele strings, the app tells you when to tune up, or down, or if you got it just right. All you need then is just the ability to recognise sound that will help you understand if you are tuning it right or not.

And if you are looking to flex your finger muscles by learning a few chords without asking for help, the app also comes with a selection of chord structures. So that you can not only tune your ukulele but also learn a few chords and play songs while chilling on your friend's rooftop.

However, if you own a ukulele and want to strike a pose with it, and also want it to be played at a party, then just let your friend do the tuning for you.
