GASTRONOMY OF LIFE

Eating is no more just an activity for survival. It is still undeniably a matter of convenience, and necessity, yet a marked change can be observed in food becoming a means of entertainment. It is sustenance for life still, but also relaxation, and very often a ride down memory lane. Gustatory tourism is also becoming more and more common, with local cuisines fighting for their justified time in the spotlight, lovingly provided by modern day foodies. There is also the effect of travel on food; somehow even the mundane everyday items become charming and inexplicably tastier if consumed during travel. Delve into these pages for a drool-inducing look into local Bangladeshi cuisine and how far it has tread.
