DRAKE BELL'S Hilarious Fashion Statement

Award ceremonies are always filled to the brim with red carpet photoshoots of superstars in all the glamour they can muster. iHeartRadio Music Awards held last Sunday was no stranger to this ritual, with many prominent artists showing up to the event in their best attires. However, one specific individual caught everyone's eyes; the eccentric Drake Bell sporting a green sweater with the iconic cartoon character Bugs Bunny printed on it! Needless to say, Drake Bell earned his own share of the spotlight that night, though certainly not for any musical accolades. After his recent music video Rewind, where he was seen shirtless, a Bugs Bunny sweater is certainly a surprising change in fashion statement!

ED SHEERAN

Dominates iHeartRadio Music Awards

The popular radio broadcasting and communications network iHeart successfully hosted its fifth annual iHeartRadio Music Awards last Sunday, and it awarded some of the most successful artists of recent time. While famous artists like Drake, Rihanna, Justin Timberlake, Bon Jovi and Pharrell Williams being frequent awardees of iHeart Radio Music Awards in previous years, it was Ed Sheeran on the spotlight this year. Not only was he chosen as the "Male Artist of the Year", his super-hit sensation Shape of You was also awarded as the "Song of the Year". While Ed Sheeran is certainly no stranger to awards, this was another addition to his long list of accolades. Furthermore, Taylor Swift was named the "Female Artist of the Year" and Bon Jovi was given the "iHeartRadio Icon Award", which is given to exemplary contributors to the international music scene.
