While the stakes may not be as high as they usually are in El Clasico tonight, Barcelona, enjoying home comforts, will still be hoping talisman Lionel Messi (L) will be able to conjure up a win. However, they will face a stern test from Cristiano Ronaldo's (R) Real Madrid, who will be hoping to inflict a defeat on their archrivals to stop them from taking another step towards La Liga's first unbeaten season.

'We won't give them a guard of honour'

REUTERS, Madrid

Real Madrid will not give La Liga champions Barcelona a guard of honour when the sides meet in El Clasico, coach Zinedine Zidane said on Saturday.

Barcelona wrapped up the title last weekend and face European champions Real on Sunday.

"After the Club World Cup they didn't want to do it for us," Zidane told a news conference. "They might have said they didn't do it because they weren't in the competition, but that's not true. You've got to win the Champions League to play in it and we're both in the Champions League.

"It's not up to me to decide about the guard of honour but they didn't do it. We, with respect, won't do it for them because they didn't.

"We respect what Barca have done in winning the league, which for me is the most difficult and nicest thing you can do. But these things happen; if they'd have given us one, we weren't going to break the tradition of doing so."

The incident Zidane was referring to happened before the Clasico on Dec. 23 when, having returned from the United Arab Emirates as Club World Cup winners, Barcelona elected not to give Real a guard of honour as is traditional in Spain. Barca won the match 3-0.

Real, third in the table, secured their place in this month's Champions League final on Tuesday and are aiming to win the trophy for the third year in a row but Zidane is planning to name a full-strength side against Barcelona.

"While the game won't change the league positions, we still want to play well and do everything we can to win," he said. "If there's players who still feel knocks, they won't play, but we've got a lot of options to replace them. (Raphael) Varane and Isco should be fine to travel."

Sunday's meeting will be the final time Barca midfielder Andres Iniesta plays in the fixture having announced he will leave the Catalans at the end of the season.

"He's a player we admire, not just any other player, and we all know how he is as a person," Zidane said. "We'll shake his hand, congratulate him and wish him luck for the future."

Sunrisers keep on shining

team's relegation sank in.

Hundreds left the bet365 stadium in the closing minutes before those that remained sang "City til I die" in a defiant rallying cry.

The blame for Stoke's predicament lies jointly with Lambert and Mark Hughes, who was sacked in January after a wretched run culminated with an embar-

But Stoke's nerves were still frayed. They couldn't cling onto their lead and Palace midfielder James McArthur equalised with a clinical finish in the 68th minute.

Forced to throw men forward in search of a winner, Lambert's side were carved open in the 86th minute as van Aanholt slotted home to seal Stoke's fate.
