

JERUSALEM: A DIVIDED CITY

INFOGRAPHIC: SHAER REAZ

While Jewish Israelis celebrate "reunification" of Jerusalem, data shows that the city is anything but unified. From concrete walls that separate to budgets that discriminate, East Jerusalem and West Jerusalem—despite being a part of the same municipality—are hardly the same, let alone a unified city. Palestinian residents of Jerusalem are just that — residents: they were not granted Israeli citizenship and do not have the right to vote in national elections, do not hold Israeli passports thousands have had their right to live in their home city revoked with the stroke of a pen.
