GAZIPUR CITY POLLS

BNP to keep close watch

Party men to stay vigilant at polling centres the night before voting day

MOHAMMAD AL-MASUM MOLLA

The BNP will keep a close eye on the Gazipur city polling stations the night before the voting day and try to assemble party men outside to guard the centres during polling as part of its new strategy for the June 26 mayoral polls.

The party adopted the strategy after taking lessons from the Khulna city polls in which the BNP mayoral candidate lost to the ruling Awami League candidate. The BNP fears the AL might employ the same "tactic of intimidation" to win the polls in Gazipur.

The BNP is also trying to boost the morale of the party men so that they do not give in to intimidation from the ruling party men or law enforcers and leave the polling stations, party insiders said.

"We are working on the new strategy after having the experience of the Khulna city polls. We are analysing the vote-rigging strategy of Awami League and hope to deal with it with our new plans," BNP standing committee member Khandakar Mosharraf Hossain told The Daily Star.

Wishing anonymity, a senior BNP leader said if the new strategy brought a good outcome, the party would follow it in the polls to Sylhet, Rajshahi and Barisal city corporations.

For picking the polling agents of the Gazipur mayor candidate, the BNP is giving preference to party leaders and activists who are not accused in any cases, the leader told this correspondent.

ROHINGYA REPATRIATION

Myanmar's claim raises eyebrows

Naypyidaw says it 'received' 62 refugees; Dhaka terms it fake, eyewash to mislead int'l community

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

Dhaka again refuted the Myanmar government's claim of "receiving" 62 Rohingya refugees, among the 700,000 who fled to Bangladesh due to a brutal military crackdown in Rakhine State.

Dhaka termed it as being fake, an eyewash and a publicity stunt to mislead the international community.

The "returnees" include 58 persons pardoned by the Myanmar's president and four others whose cases were withdrawn, according to a statement released by the State Counsellor's Office on Sunday.

They (62 people) had tried to return on their own, ignoring official procedure, and they had been arrested by the Myanmar authorities for illegally crossing the border.

However, they were pardoned by the president and released from prison before being sent to the Nga Khu Ya Reception Camp on May 26.

The state counsellor's statement did not specify when or how many had returned to the strife-torn northern Rakhine State's Maungdaw Township from refugee camps in Bangladesh. It also failed to mention the names of the villages of the returnees or even the total number of Rohingyas imprisoned.

Dhaka, however, was unaware of the developments and had no knowledge of anyone's attempt to leave the makeshift camps in Cox's Bazaar.

Officials at the foreign ministry said they had not heard of any incidents of Rohingya refugees going back to Myanmar.

TEESTA DEAL
India holds out hope

OUR CORRESPONDENT,
New Delhi

India yesterday held out hopes of the Teesta river water-sharing deal with Bangladesh and said not being able to reach the agreement cannot yet be termed a "failure" of Prime Minister Narendra Modi government's four-year rule as it still had one more year in office.

Asked by reporters if the inability to sign the Teesta deal could not be considered a failure of the Modi government since the Indian PM had insisted in April last year that it would happen during his tenure, Indian External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj said, "Our government has completed four years in office and still has one year to left. So, not reaching the Teesta treaty cannot yet be called a failure of this government."

Swaraj made the remarks while addressing a press conference here, listing the achievements of the Modi government in

DRUGS FROM MYANMAR

Malaysia seizes 1.2 tonnes of crystal meth

AFP, Kuala Lumpur

Malaysian authorities yesterday said they have seized a record of crystal methamphetamine that was shipped from Myanmar hidden in tea packets, the latest huge drugs haul in Southeast Asia.

Six people were arrested after the drugs were found during an operation by customs officers on May 22 at Port Klang on the outskirts of Kuala Lumpur.

The stash was worth 71 million ringgit ($18 million) and had been shipped in a container from Yangon in Myanmar, said Customs director-general Subromaniam Tholasy.

It was the latest massive crystal meth seizure in Southeast Asia, as the notorious "Golden Triangle" -- an ungovernable border zone that crosses Myanmar, Laos, Thailand and China -- experiences a boom in production.

Subromaniam told reporters the crystal meth haul was the biggest ever in Malaysia in terms of value and weight.

"We believe the drugs were for the local market and it is the work of a local criminal syndicate working with a Myanmar criminal gang," he said.

Three Malaysians and three Myanmar nationals aged between 22 and 48 years had been arrested, said the customs chief.

Under Malaysia's tough anti-narcotics laws, they could face the death penalty if found guilty of trafficking.

Customs officers also found heroin weighing 750 grams and about one million contraband cigarettes.
