

WHAT'S COOKING?

Since the favourite pastime of the youth is to dine outside and with the runaway cost of questionable food, maybe it's time we can take matters into our own hands. YouTube has the best cooking shows out there. Moreover, if you're really bad at cooking, they even have channels for people who are really bad at cooking.

The real icing on the cake is Bangla foodtube. Local recipes and foreign ones localised with available ingredients really make cooking far simpler than it may seem. As long as you have a timer; kitchen thermometer [ooh, fancy]; a sharp knife; and adult supervision [if you're a minor], you'd be surprised with what you can eat for a hundred bucks. Try it sometime.

APP REVIEW

For stories that are worth reading later

EESAA KAZI

Platform: iOS

Have you ever come across a gigantic article that you would've loved to come back to later? Want to read something online but can't due to the sub-par Wi-Fi connection at your grandma's place? Pocket is there to help you with all these problems.

Pocket is a brilliant app where you can easily store any web articles, photos, or videos to view them even when you're offline. Of course, there's Safari's Reading List feature but it's a downgraded version of this app at best. Pocket excels in its ease of use and organisation. It has an intuitive UI and provides a range of features such as bookmarks that make your life easier. Another advantage is that it removes all of those flashy and repetitive ads and links that distract you.

Once you try it, you'll wonder how you ever navigated the web without it.
