

IN SEARCH OF SAFETY

The curse of civilisation is that it leaves humans wanting more all the time. This need to live better than your ancestors comes in two forms. The logical necessities have often resulted in wonders of human innovation, and on the flipside, the irrational wants have led to terrible events in history. Everyone would agree that safety is a logical necessity, one that can be expected to be guaranteed in the 21st century. Where do we end up on that count?

Let's try to define safety first. In the loosest of terms, being safe can be equated to not having to fear for your life and health in day to day situations. By normal situations, I refer to walking on the streets, travelling to your hometown, or even going to school. An eye on the news would be enough to tell anyone how safe we are around these bushes, and that is an unfortunate truth to concede.

A millennial has many needs, quite often, they want more than what can be provided. Some say they want money without doing any work, it has been said that all they want is their coffee to look good so they can Instagram it, some of them can make do with a state of the art phone. But one thing that rarely makes on to this list is safety, and not being able to provide that is something of a tragedy.

– Azmin Azran, Sub-editor, SHOUT.

THIS WEEK'S HORRORSCOPE

ARIES

Hello, is it 2441139, Bella Bose, where is my shawarma?

TAURUS

O.P.A., O.P.A., where art thou?

GEMINI

Least concerned of all my wishers are my well wishers because they know I am well when I am unwell, if that makes sense.

CANCER

Your name is not your identity.

LEO

Possession of a cat made the dog vomit.

VIRGO

Be smort, not toit.

LIBRA

Nigeria is a nice country to visit.

SCORPIO

Eons ago, you existed in the same universe.

SAGITTARIUS

Some people think you're smart, but think again.

CAPRICORN

Don't cross the road, don't be a chicken.

AQUARIUS

Assuming you know everything is not cool.

PISCES

Didn't I see you at that party last night?

APP REVIEW

The perfect app for future singers

MOHUA MOULI

Platform: Android

Do you like listening to your own voice? Have you been trying to turn your phone into the condenser microphone you can't afford? Are you looking for an app that will help you record an acoustic cover of "Photograph" by Ed Sheeran because it's the only song your crush and you have an equal love for? Well then, this is the app for you.

If you use a not-so-high-end Android phone and you want to be the next Taylor Swift, Hi-Q MP3 Voice Recorder will help make those dreams come true. The app allows you to not only record audio in very good quality, but you can also adjust the gain to make your voice sound louder, as if you were an opera singer. You can also save these files in crisp quality and the format can be changed according to your needs. The available formats include MP3, WAS, M4A, OGG, and FLAC. This way you don't have to bother converting your precious voice notes. There is an option for stereo and mono as well in case you have two microphones in your phone.

So get your phone out and record that ukulele cover of La Vie En Rose and send it to your crush today.

MIXTAPE

METRO

ARCTIC MONKEYS

No Buses

PORCUPINE TREE

Trains

SYSTEM OF A DOWN

Metro

THE SMITHS

Panic

RADIOHEAD

No Surprises

BAD LUCK

Last Bus