

A Different Kind of Suchanda

"I am always in a garden, a garden that has many-hued flowers. These flowers have a bittersweet smell and an inescapable aura. I while away my entire day taking care of them, talking to them. Sometimes a sense of fulfillment resonates through the bosom of my heart, yes I always had longed for this garden that I could call of my own. These flowers are my grandchildren."

Suchanda is an incredible name of the Bangladeshi entertainment industry. A name that probably leaves all the compliments inadequate. She is a timeless beauty. The heartthrob heroine of the 60s still shimmers in the light, as if a light illuminated her from within. Her radiant smile and bewitching eyes still cast their charisma on everyone.

This woman has witnessed a number of transitions in life, several ups and downs, victories and downfalls. Yet, she never surrendered to the destiny and was resolute in her battle of life. She always had shielded her sisters from all the hazards like a shelter. These days the only reasons to her happiness and delight are her grandchildren. She treasures them.

"Our mother died at a very early age. Baba often used to fall sick. Suddenly Jahir left us too. I took all the responsibilities of the family on myself but never gave up." Personally Suchanda is a wonderfully helpful woman. Even while going through the golden era of her career, she was known for her innate tendency of helping others. Suchana has treated every human being equally throughout her entire life.

Suchanda is now a busy woman. What does she do? That is one common question she faces these days. The answer does not really change. Her whole day passes
