

Govt to import solar power from India

Says Tawfiq-e-Elahi
UNB, Dhaka

Prime Minister's Energy Adviser Dr Tawfiq-e-Elahi Chowdhury yesterday said the government has initiated a move to import solar power from India taking the advantage of time zoning. "Some areas in India have the advantage of solar power generation with their different time zoning with which Bangladesh local timing has a big difference," he said while moderating a seminar on "New Technologies: Innovations in Power and Energy" at the International Convention City Bashundhara in Dhaka.

Mentioning that there is a huge time difference between the places of India which produce solar power with Bangladesh, the PM's energy adviser said, "When they have peak noon, we have afternoon. We can easily take the advantage of that time zoning in solar power generation."

Tawfi-e-Elahi urged the researchers and university students to come up with their new innovations to develop technology to make the power and energy sector more efficient.

Speaking at the programme, Managing Director of Rahimafroz Munawar Moin said Bangladesh must move for generating 100 percent power from renewable energy by 2050, as Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina recognised Maracas Declaration which set this target globally.

He said the government should make a development plan focusing on rural areas instead of urban areas to improve people's livelihoods.

The seminar was also addressed by CTO of Tata Power Dr Arul Shanmugasundram, MD and CEO of Mytrah Energy Vikram Shah, CEO of Hero Future Energies Sunil Jain, and Sreda Chairman Helal Uddin.

Three cubs were born to tiger couple Raj-Pori on July 19, but the lone male died the next day after being accidentally crushed under the tigress. Of the two surviving female siblings, one is white, otherwise known as albino. Acting deputy curator of the zoo, Dr Shahadat Hossain Suvo, said this is the first time a white tiger was born in Bangladesh. These rare tigers are usually categorised as partial or full albino, with the latter being rarer. The eye colour differentiates between a full albino (blue) and a partial albino (green or yellow). This one is a full albino. The photos were taken yesterday.

Scouts point out ways to bring traffic order

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Dope, hearing and visibility tests for drivers on a regular basis, an increase in the number of traffic police and public buses as well as a change in the people's mindset are necessary to improve the traffic situation in Dhaka city.

These are among the 48 recommendations that the Rover Scouts made following their 10-day hectic efforts to maintain traffic discipline alongside police recently.

More than 400 scouts helped police manage traffic daily and made people aware during the traffic week which started on August 5. The week began after an unprecedented student protest for road safety following the death of two peers on July 29.

The scouts came back to the street once again on September 5, this time as part of a month-long special traffic awareness campaign of police.

Golam Mostafa, director (community development and health) of Bangladesh Scouts, said, "The recommendations came from the experience of our first phase of activities during the police week. Those were presented at the Prime Minister's Office on August 19."

Top officials at the PMO, home ministry and police officials were present at the programme while divisional commissioners were connected through video conferencing, he said.

The scouts recommended keeping traffic police out of political or administrative influence, separating the left lane of the road by putting barriers to keep those free for vehicles going left, building underpass or footbridge near roundabouts, and making stricter the scrutiny for issuing driving licenses.

They called for including traffic rules in the textbook of

M JAHIRUL ISLAM JEWEL, from Barisal

Four marketing students of Barisal University (BU) have initiated a food start-up with a cart in the campus area, setting an example that no work is too small as long as it's honest.

It has already been a month since the team of four, led by third-year management student Mehedi Hassan Plabon, set up their food cart -- selling chicken biryani for only Tk 40 in front of the university gate.

"Tutoring people for pocket money or monthly expenditure is a common practice among university students. We wanted to do something different that would be beneficial to people as well. So, we decided on a food start-up to ensure healthy and safe food at a reasonable price," said Mehedi.

"It took me almost three months to take the decision and implement it. Adulterated and unhealthy foods have flooded the market. My team does everything, from grocery shopping to cooking. We don't compromise on quality," he added.

"A full packet of chicken biryani is usually sold at Tk 120-140 at the university gate. We are selling each packet at only Tk 40. It has been possible as Mehedi bhai cooks the food himself, and we sell them in rotation, whoever remains free between 12:00pm and 3:00pm," said Golam Morshed, a first-year student and one of the team members.

Both students and teachers of the university appreciate the initiative and the chicken biryani is gaining popularity. The food cart stays at the university gate from 12:00 to 3:00pm.

"We make a profit of Tk 1,000-1,500 daily by selling up to 100 lunch packets. Sometimes, the demand is even higher," said Jannatul Ferdous, another team member.

"I buy the biryani for lunch every day as it seems safe and healthy; it's not too greasy. The food is tasty and cheap too," said Shanta, a marketing student.

"We used to laugh at them when they
