GOVERNANCE, DEMOCRACY

Work to plug gap between words, actions

TIB urges political parties

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Transparency International Bangladesh yesterday said there was a wide gap between what political parties pledged in their election manifestos and what they actually did.

A lot more effort is required to make good on the promises of promoting democracy and governance, TIB said in a study titled "Governance and Integrity in Election Manifestos of Political Parties in Bangladesh."

Lofty pledges made to impress voters before polls were often broken by both the ruling and opposition parties, TIB Executive Director Iftekharuzzaman told a press conference.

He, however, noted that there were some examples of true commitment.

Many deliveries in the form of legal, institutional and policy changes remain far from being effective enough to promote better governance and democratic institutionalisation, he told the press conference at his office.

"There are even examples of reversal of progress made. Implications of some provisions of the draft Digital Security Act on opportunities created by Right to Information Act and repeated attempts to curtail the authority of ACC by initiatives like draft Public Service Act are cases in point."

The TIB report analysed election manifestos of 11 political parties and made observations and recommendations.

The study found that none of the parties ever promised in their manifestos to practice democracy within the party.

Garbage is piled up on almost half of a street in the capital's Khilgaon area, obstructing traffic movement and giving off foul smell. Though there is a large garbage container nearby, waste is dumped there out in the open. MP's event stalls school activities for three days

Classrooms used for serving food to MP's men in Pabna

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Pabna

There were hardly any classes in the last three days at Dhobakhola Coronation High School and College in Bera upazila after local lawmaker Khandaker Azizul Haque Arzu on Saturday used the classrooms to feed thousands of villagers who left behind litter and leftover food everywhere.

The employees have been struggling to clean the classrooms, toilets and the front yard since Sunday morning.

Authorities managed to hold only a few classes yesterday with a few students.

But some of the students who attended the classes yesterday said they were nauseated by the strong smell of rotten food.

Headmaster Abu Bakar Siddique said, "The school practically turned into a garbage station after Saturday's program."

AL, BNP grassroots pledge 'no violence'

Several hundred take part in Democracy International's campaign for peaceful polls

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

Several hundred grassroots leaders of the Awami League and the BNP yesterday pledged to work towards a free, fair and peaceful general election.

They also vowed to shun violence and carry out a peaceful campaign during the upcoming polls. The leaders wanted to see smooth continuation of the democratic process through a peaceful and transparent election.

Democracy International (DI) brought together 400 AL and BNP leaders from 40 districts to inaugurate "Shantite Bijoy or Win with Peace", a national campaign seeking peace in the run-up to the polls.

Jointly funded by USAID and UKAID, the campaign was launched at Celebrity Hall of Bangabandhu International Convention Centre with a slogan "Bangladesh will win if peace wins".

It will engage and raise awareness among registered political parties and candidates in favour of peaceful elections and tolerant politics.

PM's Political Adviser HT Imam, BNP Standing Committee Member Abdul Moyeen Khan, US Ambassador to Bangladesh Marcia Bernicat, British High Commissioner to Bangladesh Alison Blake and Chief of Party for DI in Bangladesh Katie Croake along with senior political leaders attended the event.

Talking to this correspondent, some grassroots leaders said they did not

Millions evacuated in China

4 killed in Guangdong as storm makes landfall; death toll hits 65 in the Philippines

AFP, Itogon

More than three million people have been moved to safety in southern China as Typhoon Mangkhut moved northward and continued to wreak havoc across the region yesterday.

Mangkhut made landfall in Guangdong, China's most populous province, late afternoon Sunday, killing four people before heading west into neighbouring Guangxi province around midnight.

Meanwhile, Philippine rescuers yesterday searched desperately for dozens feared buried under a landslide unleashed by the typhoon.

The confirmed death toll across the northern Philippines, where the main island of Luzon was mauled by fierce winds and rain, reached 65 and was expected to rise further given the number of missing.

A 'fig leaf for genocide'

Says Australian UN expert about Suu Kyi

SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, Geneva

A leading United Nations human rights investigator has criticised Myanmar's civilian leader Aung San Suu Kyi for acting as a "fig leaf for military atrocities" against the Rohingya Muslim minority.

In an interview ahead of the release of a 400-page report on alleged "genocidal" crimes, Australian lawyer Chris Sidoti said

Nobel laureate Suu Kyi could not escape responsibility for failing to act over the violence.

The report, by three independent experts including Mr Sidoti, provides the UN Human Rights Council in Geneva with harrowing details of mass killings and rape by Myanmar's military that prompted more than 700,000 Rohingya to flee to Bangladesh last year.
