

Man killed in bomb attack

Extramarital affair blamed for the murder in Chuadanga

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Kushiata

A man was killed in a bomb attack by rivals allegedly over previous enmity at Pirpurkuria village in Chuadanga's Damurhuda upazila on Wednesday.

The deceased, Abul Kalam Kalu, 31, was son of Ketab Ali of the village. Criminals hurled two crude bombs on Kalu while he was going to a local market from his house around 8:30pm. Officer-in-Charge (OC) of Damurhuda Police Station Sukumar Bishwas said, adding that Kalu died on the spot.

Chuadanga Superintendent of Police (SP) Mahbubur Rahman visited the spot and said the murder might have taken place due to previous enmity.

OC Mahbubur said Kalu had a previous rivalry with Penga Bishwas of the village.

Earlier, following an extramarital affair with Penga's wife Roksana Khatun, Kalu eloped with her and married her about four months ago.

Later, Kalu was arrested by police and then sent to jail after Penga filed a case in this regard.

Kalu came out of the jail on September 12 and told Penga that he would take away Roksana once again that triggered a fresh rivalry between them, which might be the reason behind the murder, the OC said.

Police are trying to arrest Penga who went into hiding after the incident, the OC added.

Housing for poor lacks basic needs

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Nilphamari

Extreme poor people living in rural housing projects Ashrayan and Abasan in Jaldhaka upazila are leading miserable lives as their houses are very badly damaged and there is acute shortage of drinking water and sanitation facilities.

The houses were built by different governments on khas land in the upazila 10 to 15 years ago.

Senior Assistant at the deputy commissioner's office Bablur Rashid said there are eight rural housing projects in Jaldhaka upazila -- four under Asrayan project initiated by Awami League government and four under Abasan project undertaken by BNP government during their respective tenures -- where 1,540 families with around 8,000 members live.

This correspondent visited Gar Dharmapal Abasan project, launched in 2003 at Dharmapal union, and found 100 families with around 500 members living there in tin-sheds.

Motiar Rahman, 55, president of stakeholders' co-operative society, said all the community tube-wells except one went out of order in the last 15 years, compelling members of 100 families to collect water for drinking, washing and bathing from the lone tube-well.

Scuffles and quarrels are common here as every family wants to collect water first, said resident Rawsan Ara, 45.

Another beneficiary Khalil Mia said latrines have turned into hell as the fittings are broken and the septic-tanks are overflowing with human waste, emitting stinky odour all around.

The same situation exists in Dakkhin Deshibai Asrayan project, initiated in 1999, where 300 families live in misery.

"With the dream of a good life, we started living here, but now the dream is shattered as rusted tin roofs have broken down, forcing us to sleep under polythene sheets," said resident Marufa Begum, 50.

Forty families out of 100 left the Dakkhin Horish Chandra Pat Purbo Para Abasan project, built in 2008, as it is situated in an isolated place.

"We have no scope to earn a livelihood nearby as the area is inaccessible and surrounded by ivers, compelling almost half of the residents to migrate," said resident Faridul Islam.

The situation is the same in housing projects Purbo Shimulbari Asrayan, Bhabanchur Abasan, Chawradangi Abasan and Horish Chandra Pat Asrayan.

"As per government guidelines, stakeholders are required to form co-operative society and raise funds to do development works in their own sites. They are provided training and loans, but they ignore our advice and suffer," said District Relief and Rehabilitation Officer Md Akhtaruzzaman.

"We will look into the existing situation of the housing projects and take steps to solve the problems," said Deputy Commissioner Nazia Shirin.

Locals saw the bodies floating near North Jetty at Jaliar Dwip of Hnila union around noon and informed Teknaf Police Station.

Demand for bridge still unmet

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Mymensingh

A bamboo bridge on the river Bhogai in Netrakona's Kalmakanda upazila has been the only means for people to cross the river in Ujiakhali area.

Over 2000 people, including students from some 14 villages, use the bridge every day amid risk of accidents, said locals.

The villages include Ranigaon, Chamarjani, Aatkholi, Syedpur, Pola, Gonita, Borparua, Kholi, Bubirpara and Pagla.

The villagers have been using the bamboo bridge for the last eight years. They make the bridge by spending Tk 50,000 every year. Earlier, people used boat to cross the river.

Especially elder people, children and patients are the worst sufferers due to absence of a concrete bridge over the river, said Ali Hossain of Koilati village.

Despite repeated pleas, the authorities concerned are yet to construct a bridge there, he said.

Farmer Rahajan Mia of Bhabnikona said they do not get fair prices of their products due to poor communication with the upazila headquarters.

Local people alleged that on various occasions, the political leaders of different parties gave pledges to construct a bridge on the river but none did it yet.

Alhaj Shahidul Islam Khan, a 67-year-old farmer of Dakkhin Ranigaon village, said they have been waiting for a bridge since their childhood but could not see a bridge over the river till now.

This bridge is the only way to reach Kalmakanda upazila headquarters and Netrakona town as well, said local Awami League leader Motiur Rahman.

Shafiqul Islam, a member of Koilati Union Parishad, said there are three primary schools and four madrasas on both sides of the river but the importance of constructing a concrete bridge went unheeded.

Rubel Bhuiyan, chairman of Koilati Union Parishad, said a proposal was sent to the Local Government Engineering Department two years ago but no initiative has been taken yet.
