Going to win MY WIFE BACK

Break up and split talks make headlines in Tinsel town almost every day. It's no different this time as well. But what drew our attention more towards this split is one's attempt to reconcile with the other. After nearly three years of a happening married life, the Jersey Shore star couple declared their split. According to reports, Farley filed for divorce from Mathews, earlier this month in New Jersey, citing "irreconcilable differences." She also claimed that their relationship had been on the rocks for the past six months.

Mathews confirmed the split in a video on his Instagram. Along with a post confirming the divorce he also stated that, "Here's what's also true: I'm not done fighting. I am going to win my wife back ... I'm going to win her affection back. I am going to win her love back. I have no intentions on being a single dad. We're in counseling, so there is hope. It ain't over 'till the fat lady sings." Isn't that amazing? Farley is yet to make a comment. Mathews and Farley have two children – a daughter and a son.
