

WEDDING JEWELLERY

Style FILES

If you are planning on wearing a heavy neck piece, please make sure the blouse is of solid bold colour and has a wider cut. Because too much design will only camouflage the bling!

--Please do check out the latest enamel painted designs that look ravishing on all forms of gold.

--A tikli is a must have for a deshi bride, and can be adjusted for size and design to suit the shape of your face and forehead. A more minimalist take is to opt for the jhapta alone.

-- The earrings that you wear on the day, must always match your first neck-piece. Which means, if you are wearing more than one necklace, then the first one closest to your face must be matched with the dangles. Otherwise, the entire jewellery set-up would look chaotic.

-- A nath is a must -- whether or not you have a nose piercing! No Bengali belle ever looked complete as a bride without it.

-- Jhura churi is amazing, but it should always be coupled with a pair of robust churs.

-- The gold jewellery can always be paired with pearls and they actually look good. However, please do not combine diamonds with gold. Diamonds need to be standalone pieces -- not to be "hindered" with any other metal.

By FASHION POLICE
Photo: Sazzad Ibne Sayed
Model: Tania
Jewellery: New Jarwa House
Make-up: Farzana Shakil's
Makeover Salon
Styling: Sonia Yeasmin Isha