Inspired by Robert De Niro

Actor Bradley Cooper revealed in a recent interview about how Hollywood veteran Robert De Niro gave him the inspiration to direct a film. In the interview, Bradley said that Niro told him that he should seriously consider directing. As a result, Bradley directed his first film, A Star is Born, which starred both himself and Lady Gaga. In the interview, he said, "I tried to get him to do this movie, Limitless, and combine two characters. That was the first time I tried to cast a movie, even though I wasn't the director, and I went to see him in his hotel room. I was pitching him the whole thing and then he wound up saying yes, which blew my mind because he was my hero. After that movie, he said he thought I should direct."

GEOFFREY RUSH

Accused of Sexual Harassment Again!

Actor Yael Stone recently came out and accused Academy Award winning actor Geoffrey Rush of sexually harassing her while they were working on a theatre adaptation of The Diary of a Madman back in 2010. She said that she had not previously come out with the allegations because she considered Rush a friend and a mentor, and did not know whether or not she should reveal the truth. This is not the first time Rush has been accused of sexual harassment, after Eryn Jean Norvill accused him of harassing her while they did King Lear together. Rush, however, has denied all accusations.
