

Chester's son joins 'GREY DAZE'

Recent news has revealed that Chester's son, Jaime Bennington (22) is entering the music scene by joining his father's old band, Grey Daze. It has been said that Jaime will re-record some of his father's old tracks. In a Facebook post, the band stated, "Chester would have been so very proud of his son Jaime Bennington. We had Jaime sing along with his father last night at NRG Recording Studios and his voice is great!" Back in 1993, Chester formed the alternative-rock band Grey Daze, which was active from 1993 to 2001.

Chester was the lead vocalist for majority of that period. In '96, Chester joined the band Hybrid Theory, which is now known as Linkin Park. It has been said that Chester was about to get active again with Grey Daze, and was about to work on a new project back in 2017; but it was halted due to his unfortunate passing on the 20th of July that year. It is reported that their new project will be released soon.
