Another great addition this year is Aschorjo – a comics digest bringing together the best of many. Sci-fi, action comic enthusiasts will not be disappointed as titles like Lo, Maruf are out to satisfy the adventure seekers. For younger readers, nearly fifty books on poems, jokes and translated children's stories are waiting to be picked up. Panjeree, this year, has many debut pieces for young readers, including Bhooteer Cheyee Odvut by Niloy Nandy and Bangladesher Bagher Golpo by Khosru Chowdhury, Bangladesh's most well-known tiger enthusiast! Older readers need not worry as there are a hundred titles to browse through this year.

From 2001, this publication house has been tireless in its efforts to provide young readers with reading material that not only entertain, but enhance the mind.

You can check out all the titles from Panjeree at this year's Ekushey Boi Mela at <http://panjeree.com/boimela2019/Catalogue/>

Special thanks to Niloy Nandy, Deputy Manager, Creative Department at Panjeree Publications Ltd. for his insight.

Good reading habits

Book lists and scheduling are not the end of the road to the crisis of no-reading! If a child sees his or her parents not going near a book, that child certainly cannot be expected to pick up a book on his or her own. Parents need to establish a reading habit themselves because children pick up good (and bad) habits from their parents.

Of course, interest is a matter of concern as well. Your disinterest might work to deter the child from the books. A good practice here is to mix and match varieties of stories, including topics you like. Reading and creating conversation about a book is a key skill which you can easily impart to your child.

Finally, if you are worried that reading 'outside' material can hamper with your child's studies, think for once if too much studying will guarantee a fool-proof future for him or her. Fiction and non-fiction books unrelated to studies, in moderation, can only make way for more possibilities.

CORRIGENDUM

Anniversary Supplement

The Segment 4, of the Anniversary Supplement of The Daily Star, dated February 23, 2019 ran a column by Rubaiya Ahmed on page 22 under the headline "Zero Chemicals: Hero Toiletries!" In the same issue, under a group of articles promoting vegan and some off beat options in toiletries for our readers, the brands Soaperstar, Ribana and Amlaki were also featured. However, these products have no ties to the vegan columnist Rubaiya Ahmed and her writeup. We apologise for any inconveniences caused.

Regular issue

In Volume 18, Issue 36, of Star Lifestyle, dated February 19, 2019, the article "Eating well with limitations" by columnist Kaniska Chakraborty, printed on page 6, featured pictures which were not set in order of the text, and we apologise for any inconvenience caused.
