"Even then, I apologise if any of my students got hurt by the statement, and I seek cooperation from them in running the university's academic activities smoothly as before," he said.

On Tuesday, students started demonstrations claiming that the VC arranged an Independence Day programme on campus without inviting students, and when they protested this action, he called them "razakar Bachcha" (children of Pak collaborators).

Later on Thursday, authorities shut down the university for an indefinite period amid protests.
