Samsul shines in radish seeds, shows way to others

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Nilphamari

It was only around 10 years ago when Samsul Islam, now 35, of Panchapukur village in Sadar upazila obtained a graduation degree from a local college with a dream like many others to join a government job.

His dream shattered soon when he realised that getting a government job is not that easy.

But he did not lose his heart and decided to do something special in agriculture sector on the 15 bighas of farmland his father has.

With his hard work and innovative agriculture method, Samsul has now become an idol to many in his locality as well as two other adjacent villages.

He has not only changed his own fate, but also the socio-economic state of three villages -- Polashbari, Maricha and Panchapukur -- as many of the farmers are now adopting his cultivation method.

"As the soil here is suitable for radish farming and farmers get a good price of their produce in the early winter," Samsul said, adding that in an attempt to do something new he started cultivating radish, consulting with agriculture experts.

"I suggested Samsul to cultivate radish twice in a season," Panchapukur union Sub Assistant Agriculture Officer (SAAO) Anwarul Islam said, adding that one can cultivate radish first in October-November which will bring a handsome profit and then in between December and March, which has a great demand as seeds.

As per the SAAO's suggestion, Samsul started radish seeds cultivation in one bigha land in 2014.

"One kilogram of seed is required for one bigha land with the cultivation cost of Tk 8,000 to Tk 10,000," said Samsul, son of Hashim Uddin of Panchapukur village.

In the first year, he produced 220 kg seeds and earned Tk 30,000, he added.

Since then, Samsul gradually expanded the area of cultivation and this year he cultivated radish seeds in 10 bighas of land, he said.

Within the next five years, Samsul bought motorcycle, constructed a brick-built house and enrolled his son to a local kindergarten school.

A number of growers like Ekramul, 50, Saiful, 40, Ainul, 45, said after incurring consecutive loss in paddy and potato farming, Samsul's innovative agriculture method helped them to get rid of those unhappy days.

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Bogura

Bogura district administration and Water Development Board (WDB) for the third consecutive day yesterday continued their joint drive to remove illegal structures encroaching on the Karotoa river.

The joint team yesterday tore down six small structures including toilets built by Bogura municipality in Nataipara area of Bogura town, said Tomal Hossain, assistant commission (AC) of land in Bogura Sadar.

On Friday, they demolished 12 small structures in Bhatkandi area of the town, while on Thursday, the authorities dismantled nine small structures, including a water pumphouse built by the municipality, from the banks of the river in Maltinagar area, he added.

According to a survey conducted by the land office in Sadar upazila in February through March last year, at least 38 illegal structures of different sizes were constructed by encroaching on the river during the last 10 to 15 years.

On November 25 the same year,

The Daily Star ran a report on the issue, headlined "Onslaught on Karotoa on: Wanton grabbing leaves the river on its death throes".

On February 25, prior to launching the drive, the district administration had sent out notices to unlawful occupiers, asking them to remove their establishments, said AC (Land) Tomal.

During visits to the area, establishments belonging to many of the listed encroachers, however, were still found to be intact.

On Thursday, the first day of the drive, the authorities were forced to back down from removing a mosque in Maltinagar area as hundreds of locals including women and students from madrasas raised objection by taking position at the site.

Zulfiqar Ramhan Pramanik, president of Maltinagar Baitul Hamd Jam'a Mosque, said some parts of the land where the mosque is built belong to private owners, while some parts belong to the river.

Despite the fact, the structure of the mosque does not hinder the flow of the river, he said, adding that religious sentiment played a role when locals gathered to protect the mosque.

When contacted, Hasan Mahmud, executive engineer of WDB in Bogura, said they would take necessary action after verifying the claims made by the mosque authorities.

AC (Land) Tomal said according to CS (Cadastral Survey) map, the land, on with the building of the mosque is located, belongs to the river.

The drive will go on until all illegal structures are removed from the river, he added.

Ziaur Rahman, secretary of Bangladesh Poribesh Andolon (Bapa) in Bogura, said, "[Although] there are over a hundred illegal structures on the banks of the Karotoa river in Bogura Sadar upazila, the district administration's list only has [names of] 38 grabbers."

Responding to the claim, AC (Land) Tomal said, "The list of grabbers we are following now is still incomplete. However, we are working on to prepare a comprehensive list of grabbers in Sadar upazila. It'll take another two months."
