

SHINE

every day, everywhere!

Brace yourselves, because summer is almost here! As the mercury rises, so does fashion temperatures, soaring with oxidised silver and silver plated jewellery pieces. What is oxidised jewellery? The answer might quite surprise you, but it is the process of giving any silver trinket a blackish hue by mixing it with other metals, also known as blackened silver.

Each piece is unique, but with a twist of old charm and novelty, ever so delicately incorporated into it, in addition to being versatile, affordable in comparison to gold, and in myriad patterns, stonework, intricate carvings, and even meenakari work on them.
