

60 sent to jail for forging firearm licences

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Dinajpur

A Rangpur court yesterday sent 60 people to jail in two cases filed for forgery to obtain firearm licences. Senior District and Sessions Judge Rasheda Sultana passed the order after rejecting their bail pleas, said Public Prosecutor Abdul Maleq. Police said a section of officials led by Shamsul Islam, office assistant at Rangpur Deputy Commissioner's office, allegedly issued and renewed licences against 400 firearms by tampering signature of the then DC between 2003 and 2015. Police arrested Shamsul in 2016. Anti-Corruption Commission and the district administration later filed the cases over the matter.

Six get death for killing govt officer in 2009

COURT CORRESPONDENT

A Dhaka court yesterday sentenced six persons to death for the murder of Aminul Haque alias Anis Khadem, an administrative officer of Dhaka Divisional Commissioner's Office, in May 2009. The convicts are: Shahidur Rahman Khadem, Mahbub Alam Liton, Sheikh Shamim Ahmed, Md Jewel, Kamal Hossain Biplob and Sohel. Two other accused are: Abdullah Md Nazim Uddin Babu and Ajgor Hossain Rana. Babu was given life in jail while Rana was acquitted as the charge brought against him could not be proved. Liton, Biplob and Babu are absconding while five others were present at the court yesterday. The punishment of the fugitives will be effective from the day of their arrest or surrender and the convicts can file appeals with the High Court within 30 days from the receipt of the judgement copy. Judge Abdur Rahman Sardar of Speedy Trial Tribunal-4 of Dhaka handed down the sentence in presence of five of the accused at a packed courtroom. Earlier, the prosecution and the defence had completed their arguments and the tribunal recorded statements of 17 prosecution witnesses including complainant of the case. Aminul was shot to death near Dhaka's Malibagh Shahi Masjid on May 4, 2009. The government officer had been serving as the general secretary of Kharampur Mazar Committee (shrine committee) in Brahmanbaria's Akhaura. According to the case, Shahidur Rahman ordered the killing of Aminul following a spat over the ownership of properties in the shrine. Aminul's son Saidul Haque Khadem filed a murder case with Motijheel Police Station the day after he was killed. During the investigation, all eight accused confessed to the killing to magistrates on different dates. On December 30 of 2009, Rapid Action Battalion (Rab) pressed charges against the eight accused and the tribunal framed charges against them on June 8, 2014.

After her complaint, the auditorium entrance was locked; her security personnel checked journalists with permission. When some journalists wanted to leave afterwards, security personnel termed them "thieves". Video footage later showed that a worker involved in stage decoration took the phones. Later, Kaiser regretted the matter and termed it a "misunderstanding".

PALLIATIVE CARE

Experts emphasise raising awareness

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Life might be cut short by an incurable disease but a better understanding of how to make the journey meaningful with love and care can help ease the sufferings of the patients. This is what is known as palliative care. It can help a child with terminal cancer and their parents deal with the medical and psychological aspects better. Such facilities are rare in the country and whatever services available now are Dhaka-centric, while as many as 12,000 children are being diagnosed with cancer every year. One in four children with cancer does not survive five years after the diagnosis. Palliative care can improve quality of their end-of-life experiences and support families even after patients' death, said medical experts, social workers and parents yesterday at a seminar and workshop organised by Hospice Bangladesh, with support from Aastha Hospice and World Child Cancer, in the capital's Gulshan. All healthcare facilities combined -- private and public -- have only 18 beds for palliative care of paediatric cancer patients. "It is far from what's necessary," said Prof Zohora Jameela Khan, of paediatric hematology and oncology department at Dhaka Medical College Hospital. Palliative care is often termed "low-tech and high-touch", she said. The care focuses on healing rather than curing. The caregivers -- through conversations, counselling and listening -- help patients and their families accept death and prepare for it, said Shahinur Kabir, founder director and palliative physician of Hospice Bangladesh. Recollecting her experience with a patient named Pavel, Zohora said his parents were willing to understand what their son needed while undergoing treatment at ASHIC Foundation's palliative care unit in Dhanmondi. Pavel knew, like many children with cancer, that his days were numbered. His wish to have a family trip to Cox's Bazar was fulfilled with help from ASHIC, a charity working to support children with cancer and their parents.

groups gaining a foothold in the camps. Already, the Chattogram-based Islamist movement Hefazat-e-Islam -- which has publicly called for jihad against Myanmar -- has considerable influence over the madrasa network in the camps, through the funding and religious scholars that it provides, it added. The ICG brief said with no near-term prospect of returning to Myanmar, almost a million Rohingya refugees in camps in Cox's Bazar face an uncertain future. Although an impressive aid operation has stabilised the humanitarian situation, attention must now turn to refugees' lives and future prospects, in particular improved law and order and education for children. As evening draws in and humanitarian workers withdraw to their bases in Cox's Bazar town, security is in the hands of untrained and unarmed night watchmen appointed from among refugees, it added. Saying that a determined and often violent struggle is currently underway for de facto control of the camps, ICG suggested that Bangladesh institute an effective police presence in the camps and bring perpetrators of crimes to justice.

Russell returns home

"It usually takes four weeks to get used to an artificial leg. With more practice Russell will find it easier to walk," said Shafiq. "This artificial leg will surely make my life easier and better. I am feeling very happy now," said Russell, "I am grateful to CRP for donating the prosthetic limb and supporting me throughout." When asked about his future plans, Russell said he hasn't made any plans as he is yet to get full compensation. "I will plan for my family after receiving the full amount." Russell, 26, was knocked down by a Green Line bus near Mayor Mohammad Hanif Flyover in the capital's Dholaiapur on April 28 last year. The incident happened after an altercation broke out between Russell and the bus driver over rear-ending his car. As Russell chased down the bus, the bus driver ran him over. On April 11, Green Line Paribahan handed Tk 5 lakh to Russell following a High Court order and is expected to pay another Tk 45 lakh in 30 days.

Journos must overcome threats Say trainers at Savar workshop

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Journalists in today's digital world must take increased safety measures to save themselves from digital and physical threats, said trainers at a three-day workshop held in Savar. If unapprehensive, journalists face an unprecedented professional and physical risks from hackers and trackers while using various digital devices and internet applications during discharging their professional duties, they said. News outlets also should take safety measures when their journalists cover sensitive issues and conflict situations, they said at the training themed "Digital and Physical Security for Journalists".

Bangladesh NGOs Network for Radio and Communication (BNNRC) with support from Internews, organised the workshop at CCDB Hope Centre. Ten journalists from print and electronic media in and outside the capital attended the event that ended on Wednesday, said a press release. Internews Country Director Syed Zain Al Mahmood said, "The workshop is an opportunity to learn about the digital safety and security and how to protect journalists from digital threats..." US journalist Brian Conley conducted the workshop where he mentioned risks of tracking unprotected and unlocked information and data sent by emails and SMS.
