

HOOKUPS & BREAKUPS

Broken Shards of the Happily Ever After

The 2006 Disney movie High School Musical stars Vanessa Hudgens and Zac Efron, had won many hearts with their real-life romance in front of the camera. The two fell head over heels for each other while shooting for the TV film, and had been together for many years. The couple shot three installments of the film and parted ways in 2010, two years after the third installment was premiered. Now nine years after breakup with former beau Zac Efron, Hudgens, recently opened up about their relationship and why it didn't work out. In a recent interview, Hudgens said, "(The relationship) started off really organi-cally, and I could not have been more grateful to have that relationship at the time ... (The movie) was this massive phenomenon all of a sudden and all eyes were on me ... I had someone to lean on who was going through it as well." Regarding their split, Hudgens said that the relationship went sour because Efron started receiving attention from other women which irked her, "Girls were running after him, and I was giving them death stares. Then I realised that's not what that's about." Hudgens is currently in a relationship with actor Austin Butler, while Efron is rumored to be dating Olympic swimmer Sarah Bro.

The Expensive Divorce

It is now time for pop singer Adele to say Hello from the other side, as she recently bid goodbye to her married life. She and her husband, Simon Konecki have separated after eight years of togetherness and three years of marriage. However, the two have decided to remain committed to raising their son together. The 30 year old Adele met the love of her life in 2011 and decided to tie the knot in 2016. Her busy schedule and time apart from family are the main reasons for the couple to drift apart. According to reports, the couple did not sign a prenup before marriage and unfortunately the singer's multi-million dollar fortune is now at stake. If the divorce is to be filed at the state of California, Konecki may be entitled to as much as half of the singer's earnings. We really hope that the divorce goes without a tiff and they part ways with dignity.

Arjun Rampal start's all over again

Model-turned-actor Arjun Rampal is ready for fatherhood yet again. He and his girlfriend, South African model and actor, Gabriella Demetriades are expecting their first child. He recently expressed his gratitude to and affection for his lover by posting a beautiful picture of them on his Instagram handle. In the photo, we can see the couple passionately holding each other, where the Rock On actor was all casually suited and Gabriella was sporting her pregnancy bump in a flaired gown. Arjun captioned, "Blessed to have you and start all over again.... thank you baby for this baby," and on the other hand Gabriella reposted the same photo saying, "Grateful for you too. Can't wait to meet you." After 20 years of togetherness Rampal parted ways with his estranged wife, Mehr Jesia, with whom he shares two daughters, Mahikaa and Myra. Dating rumors of the duo started to make news in November 2018. Later, the couple became public about their relationship in January 2019.

