Principles that outlines such institutions' role, formation, function and procedural aspects of its work.

The present NHRC's tenure is about to end this June, and so the selection process of new chairman and members are to begin soon. The civil society didn't have any information about the last three selection process, though it had repeatedly insisted on being engaged, speakers said yesterday.

The chairman and six members -- one permanent and five honorary -- are appointed by a seven-member selection committee; six of them are government appointees and one from the opposition bench in parliament. The committee recommends two names against each vacant post based on the decision of majority votes.

GANHRI observed that the four-member quorum requirement appears to allow nominations solely by government appointees. It emphasised the importance of a clear, transparent and participatory selection process to promote independence of, and public confidence in the senior leadership of the commission.

Speakers at the discussion said NHRC should have one woman in one of the two posts of chairman and full-time member. One from the opposition bench should be present in the quorum.

When one comes from the judiciary or the administration and joins the Commission on deputation for administrative work, it becomes difficult for them to work without government influence, said human rights lawyer Salma Ali.

Those in honorary posts cannot be expected to give their best in discharging their duties at the Commission, and so their positions should be changed to full-time jobs, speakers said.

"Above all, the 2009 law has to be amended for a more transparent and inclusive selection process. Until then, the law should be complied with and civil society members should be consulted during the selection process. GANHRI recommendations have to be followed as well, said Shepa Hafiza, executive director of ASK.

Ninth wage board award within June

Quader tells journalists

BSS, Dhaka

Obaidul Quader, convener of the cabinet committee to effect the ninth wage board award for journalists and employees of newspapers and news agencies, yesterday said the wage board award will be announced by June.

"The government will hold a meeting with stakeholders on June 12 for implementation of the ninth wage board award for journalists and employees of newspapers and news agencies," he told reporters at the secretariat after a meeting of the cabinet committee.

Quader said the issue was stalled and that is why the government decided to hold meeting with stakeholders before its announcement.

He said the meeting will be held on June 12.

"Our investigation is flawless and supported by enough witnesses, evidence, forensics and digital forensics," he said, adding that his local superiors and higher officials at the police headquarters in Dhaka closely monitored the investigation procedures.

He said PBI did not force the complainant to accept anything. "We recorded the statement that he gave us in writing."

About witnesses, he said, "A number of witnesses saw her body hanging from the ceiling. Some of them include other Maldivian medical students."

Raudha's body was almost decomposed when it was exhumed from her grave for the second autopsy and the autopsy report could not be definitive. But it says

"possibility of suicidal hanging could not be excluded," he said.

"As per law, when there is difference between two forensic reports, the report that bears clear points would be acceptable," he said, adding that her first autopsy had found death by suicide.

The PBI was aware of her conversations with her classmate, but those conversations were not relevant to the case. Apart from the 17,000 pages of conversations with her boyfriend, PBI examined 3,000 pages of conversations with some other persons that suggest her despair prior to her final moments, he said.

"The complainant filed the murder case based on information that he had not verified," the PBI investigation officer said.
