

Millennial nymph

It's 2019, and it seems like everything is being re-defined.

And yet, white remains a staple, just like it's noir counterpart. The modern woman embodies it all, with her natural grace and beauty to her strength and resilience.

Hamlet said, "Frailty thy name is woman" and Congreve wrote, "Hell hath no fury like the woman scorned;" she is both and none and everything else she chooses to be.
