DENGUE OUTBREAK

Detection kits in short supply

Two more die in Dhaka; 1,477 new cases reported

HELEMUL ALAM AND SHAHEEN MOLLAH

At a time when the country is grappling with a record number of dengue cases, different hospitals, clinics and diagnostic centres face a short supply of a kit that is needed to detect the disease at the early stage.

Health experts and doctors say the government needs to import the kit in large numbers so that dengue patients do not suffer due to late detection of the fever.

The kit is needed to do NS1 antigen test (nonstructural protein 1). Introduced in 2006, the test allows rapid detection on the first day of fever, before antibodies appear some five or more days later.

It takes only 15 minutes to get the test result after a doctor or a lab technician takes drops of blood from the patient's fingertip using the kit.

Meanwhile, two more people, including a female police official, died of dengue yesterday.

With them, at least 43 people died of SEE PAGE 2 COL 4

DENGUE CONTROL

Kolkata shows the way

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh can take a page out of Kolkata's playbook in tackling the spread of dengue, which has already infected a record 17,183 people in the country.

Over the last few years, Kolkata City Corporation has been working round the year to control the population of Aedes mosquito, the carrier of the disease.

Earlier, the corporation would start its mosquito-controlling activities during the monsoon, but by then the virus would have spread SEE PAGE 2 COL 4

TEST OF PASTEURISED, RAW MILK

Yet another report, more confusion

BARC tests find no harmful heavy metal, antibiotic

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

There is no harmful substance in packaged and raw milk processed and sold by local companies, the agriculture minister said yesterday, citing a latest government study.

Bangladesh Agriculture Research Council (Barc) carried out the tests this month at the SGS India, one of the world's leading testing and certification company, said Abdur Razzaque while sharing the findings at a press conference at the secretariat.

The findings are at odd with the results of multiple recent tests carried out by the BSTI, the Bangladesh Food Safety Authority, the National Food Safety Laboratory and the Dhaka University.

Each of these tests, done at top government and private laboratories, found numerous harmful substances in milk, including detergent, pesticides, antibiotics meant for human, lead and cadmium.

The latest study comes amid concerns about the quality of packaged and non-packaged milk.

It also comes a day after Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina cast doubt over some recent studies. She also spoke about the High Court ban on production, marketing, sale SEE PAGE 2 COL 2
