

MUSICAL ventures

Student of the Year star Alia Bhatt has lent her voice to a number of songs, like Samjhawaan Unplugged, Love You Zindagi, Humsafar and a version of Ikk Kudi, by Diljit Dosanjh, after her debut track, Soocha Saaha for the Imtiaz Ali directed film, Highway. Now, it has been reported that the actor will be adding something else to her portfolio – a collection of music videos. She'll be seen in The Doorbeen's single, Prada. According to sources, "The catchy song features Alia dancing with international back-up dancers with car spare parts, bike tyres, an STD booth, photo-frames, radio set-pieces and a guitar, among other things, forming the backdrop." On acting front, her new film, Takht will hit the theatres in the beginning of 2020.

AGE is just a number

The Wolf of Wall Street actor Leonardo DiCaprio has been dating model, Camila Morrone for around a year now, but their relationship hasn't been free of criticism. The latest of which has been related to the twenty two year age gap between them. This began after Camila posted a picture of Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart on her Instagram, captioned with "A love like this". Many left negative comments on her post, saying how it was a comparison between Camila's relationship with Leo as Lauren and Humphrey too had an age gap of over twenty years.

However, Camila soon hit back. She posted a story, where she said, "I just read some of the comments on my Instagram and...my God, people are so mean and full of anger with people that they know nothing about." She concluded the video with an advice to "live with a little less hatred" as it "feels pretty good".

Not a laughing matter

In a recent interview, actor Jake Gyllenhaal talked about how his Brokeback Mountain co-star, the late Heath Ledger disliked people ridiculing the said film. The Ang Lee directed film was set in the 1960s, and surrounded two sheep herders in Wyoming, who fall in love. In the interview, Jake said, "I see people who have joked with me or criticised me about lines I say in that movie. That's the thing I loved about Heath. He would never joke." He further added that the late actor would shut down anyone who tried to joke about the film, saying that it's "about love". The film, which was sometimes wrongly labelled as just a "gay cowboy movie", had won three Oscars in 2006, and received notable praise from critics and audiences alike.
