BGB recovers body from Chuadanga border

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Kushtia

Border Guard Bangladesh (BGB) yesterday recovered the body of a Bangladeshi national, who was allegedly beaten dead by the Indian Border Security Force (BSF) on Tuesday night, from Thakurpur border in Chuadanga's Damurhuda upazila.

The victim was identified as Mohammad Abdullah, 45, son of Golam Rasul of Thakurpur village in the upazila.

Deceased's younger brother Habibur Rahman said a BSF team from Murshidabad's Maluapara camp chased Abdullah near border pillar No 89-90 when a group of Bangladeshi men were bringing in cattle from India through Thakurpur border on Tuesday night.

BSF troops later caught Abdullah, but other members of the group somehow managed to flee the scene, Habibur said.

Being informed by the villagers, BGB members recovered Habibur's body from the border area inside Bangladesh territory yesterday morning and handed it over to Damurhuda police, who sent it to Chuadanga Sadar Hospital for autopsy, Officer in Charge of Damurhuda Police Station Sukumar Biswas said.

Habibur claimed that Abdullah was later beaten dead by the BSF members, but BGB officials did not confirm it.

Director of BGB 6 Battalion in Chuadanga Lt Col Sazzad Hossain said they were looking into the matter.

Biodiversity under threat as settlers clearing forest

Environmentalists demand steps to save the 5631-acre Lathitila forest in Moulvibazar's Juri upazila

MINTU DESHWARA, Moulvibazar

Lathitila forest in Juri upazila of Moulvibazar faces a serious threat as settlers continue clearing forest areas for fruit cultivation and fish farming there.

The forest comprising 5631.4 acres of land is in an area covered with hillocks.

During the Pakistan period, 30 landless families were allowed to live in the 'forest village' for taking care of the forest and each family got two and a half acres of land to grow crops for their living, said officials of the forest department.

Now the number of settler families has increased to 500.

Visiting the spot recently, this correspondent found dwelling houses at Lachhara, Rupachhara, Hayachhara and Champatila in the forest. Lemon, orange, banana and ginger are cultivated there. A few fish farms have also been made.

There were remains of various species of dead or dying trees in Rupachhara and Champatila.

"A section of people cut off the roots of forest trees, making them unable to take nutrients from soil. As the trees gradually die, various fruit trees are planted there to occupy the land," said a youth seeking anonymity.

"They apply this technique, locally called 'ringing', as the forest department will file cases if the live trees are felled directly. Some forest officials are involved in the process," he said.

Forest department officials on different occasions assisted in the construction of houses, cultivating fruit and fish, and stealing trees in the forest, said several other local residents, also seeking anonymity.

"Due to loss of habitat and food crisis, wild animals often come down to the locality. Owls were seen in Champatila even two or three years ago.

Now they are hardly visible as trees are not that available. There are occasional incidents of deer hunting in the forest," said a local youth.

"We use the ringing method to vacate areas in and around the forest so that fruit trees can be planted there. Many people are growing fruits or cultivating fish in the forest area for living," said Abdur Razzak, a headman of 'forest villagers' in Lathitila.

This correspondent saw a few hanumans at Champatila.

Abdul Karim Kim, general secretary of the Bangladesh Paribesh Andolon's Sylhet chapter, said the forest is gradually shrinking and its biodiversity faces threat due to human settlement and increase in commercial fruit cultivation.

People living in the area have to be rehabilitated elsewhere to save the forest, he said.

Abdul Mannan, range officer of the forest department in Juri upazila, said, "Nobody took our permission for cultivation of fruits and fish in Lathitila forest. Two or three months ago, I removed two houses that were built illegally."

He claimed that no forest department men were involved in harming the forest.

Villagers make artistic high structure for Eid congregation

People in Sirajganj's Ullapara built the unique eidgah as the ground gets flooded in monsoon

AHMED HUMAYUN KABIR TOPU, Pabna

People of Narashinghpara, Shukolhaat and Shuklai villages of Boropangashi union in Ullapara upazila of Sirajganj offered the Eid-ul-Azha prayer on a large artistic concrete platform, built through their own initiative for using as eidgah, at Shuklai village on Sunday.

The Eid congregational prayer in the area was held on boats or roads for the last couple of years as the lone eidgah for the three villages goes under floodwater during the monsoon in June and remains inundated for four to five months, said Afzal Hossain, president of the eidgah management committee.

As a way out, the villagers took an initiative for constructing the eidgah venue on pillars, he added.

"The locals bought 13 decimals of land at Shuklai village. After collecting Tk 20 lakh through subscription from the villagers in 2015, they started work for construction of the eidgah floor on pillars," said Md Mostafa Zahangir, a respected villager.

"Eventually the fund rose to Tk 56 lakh as many others donated for the purpose. The construction of the special eidgah was completed in June this year and a large number of people of the three villages offered the Eid-ul-Azha prayer here on Sunday," said Mostafa, also a Dhaka-based journalist and writer.

The villagers have taken a good initiative to solve their problem by establishing a unique eidgah, said Md Abul Kalam Azad, member of Boropangashi union parishad.
