Scanty rain worries Khulna farmers

Croplands drying up, Aman seedbeds damaged

DIPANKAR ROY, Khulna

Aman cultivation in the ongoing sowing season is badly hampered amid insufficient rain in the district as farmers are reluctant to use saline water for irrigation.

Sowing of Aman paddy starts early July and continues till late August, but hundreds of acres of land in nine upazilas still remain uncultivated, said Pankaj Kanti Majumder, deputy director of Department of Agriculture Extension (DAE) in Khulna.

The upazilas include Batiaghata, Dacope, Dumuria, Paikgachha and Koira.

About 18,900 hectares of land in Dacope upazila have been brought under Aman cultivation this year but a large number of farmers cannot prepare seedbeds due to scanty rainfall during the ongoing rainy season, said Mehedi Hasan, agriculture officer in Dacope upazila.

Only one to two percent farmers could prepare seedbeds in the upazila this time, said Mehedi.

As the growers are dependent on rainwater for Aman farming, cultivation of the paddy usually does not require any irrigation.

Rainfall has been decreasing in the district for the last five years, hampering Aman cultivation, said Amirul Azad, senior met officer of Khulna.

Meanwhile, the canals and rivers in the district contain saline water, much to the worry of farmers.

Khulna Met Office recorded 336 millimetres of rainfall from July 1 to August 22 this year while it was 371 millimetres during the same period last year and 689 millimetres in 2017.

Only 115 millimeters of rainfall was recorded in June this year while it was 266 last year and 356 millimetres in 2017, said Amirul.

Proshad Roy, a farmer of Khalashibunia village in Batiaghata upazila, said after preparing the Aman seedbeds, they can wait highest 40 days to sow the seedlings in the field.

“But the farmers of my locality could not prepare seedbeds for lack of rains,” he said, adding that “My land developed cracks due to continuous high temperature for the last three months.”

Another grower Ayub Ali of Katianangla village in Batiaghata said “Generally we depend on rainwater. After mid-June, rains come in the region but it seems summer season this time.”

Dacope upazila Agriculture Officer Mehedi said farmers have faced difficulties to prepare seedbeds due to lack of rains this year.

Shyama Prosad Mondal, a farmer of Sutarkhali village in Dacope upazila, said he has faced manifold problems to prepare seedbeds on twelve bighas of his land.

Due to insufficient rainfall, he used water from canal for irrigation and as the canal contains saline water, his seedbeds were ruined, said Shyama Prosad.

There is no rain in their locality in the last couple of weeks, he said.

The target of Aman cultivation in the district this season is 92,807 hectares of land but only two to three percent of land have been brought under the cultivation till July 15, said sources at DAE in Khulna.

But during the same period last year, Aman was sown on over 90,000 hectares of land.

Insufficient rainfall is hampering Aman cultivation during the ongoing peak sowing season, said the DAE deputy director.

Now the farmers are watering their land with pumps, he said.

He, however, hoped that the target will be achieved as the sowing will continue till August.

Khulna district produced over 2 lakh 75 thousand tonnes of Aman paddy last year.

College girl sues boyfriend

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Dinajpur

A college girl appeared at a police station in Rangpur on Wednesday with a dead foetus and sued her boyfriend and his friend for aborting her unborn child by rendering her unconscious.

In the statement of the case filed with Gangachara Police Station, the first-year college student said on Monday, when she was 26 weeks pregnant with the child of Mohammad Jony, his friend Mohammad Shimul told her that Jony wanted to marry her and the former wanted to meet her at a clinic in Rangpur town.

Jony, who recently passed HSC and son of Bishadur Rahman of Ghagatatari Bhangi village in Gangachara upazila, had cut off ties with her after she became pregnant with his child. Before going completely out of reach, he refused to marry her and asked her to abort the child.

After arriving in the town from Gangachara on Monday, Shimul made her wait at the clinic till late at night, saying that Jony was still on the way from Dhaka. “I trusted him and continued waiting for Jony,” she said.

Shimul then brought her food as it was getting late. Soon after having the food, she slipped into deep sleep. “He must have given me sedative drugs in the meal,” she said.

On Tuesday morning, she realised that her child was aborted through surgery. Later, at her persistent demand, the clinic authorities were compelled to give the dead foetus to her.

She then went home and took her family members along to the police station to file the case on Wednesday.

Susanta Kumar Sarkar, inspector (investigation) of the police station, said they launched an investigation and autopsy of the foetus has been conducted.

Sub-Inspector Moqbul Hossain, the investigation officer, said they would take the girl along in Rangpur town to identify the clinic.

Physically challenged yet indomitable

Born without right hand and deformed left hand, Afzal runs pharmacy and Flexiload business

MINTU DESHWARA, Moulvibazar

A physically challenged by birth, Md Afzal Hosain of Pattai village in Moulvibazar’s Kulaura upazila has set a laudable example of self-reliance and benevolent service through determination and hard work.

Afzal, 34, was born without the right hand and a deformed and weak left hand.

Many would expect such a man to depend on others and set their expectations low in terms of anything they can deliver.

But, Afzal proves otherwise.

He passed Kamil (equivalent to master’s) from Jamia Islamia Darul Ulum Madrasa in Bishwanath upazila of Sylhet in 2006.

Afterwards he completed a course at a government-run organisation to qualify for running a pharmacy and received technical training under the government’s youth development programme in Sylhet.

“In 2010, I opened a pharmacy at my village bazaar. Now I am running the shop along with Flexiload business here,” he said.

Afzal keeps his pharmacy open even during rain or cold, said Md Salauddin, a resident of the area.

Visiting his pharmacy at Pattai on an afternoon a few days ago, this correspondent found Afzal attending customers.

“I give medicines for free to ultra-poor people when they have serious problems. I want no one to die without medicine or primary treatment,” he added.

Afzal, fourth among six siblings, lost his father when he was a third grader.

Syed Ashfak H Tanvir, general secretary of Robirbazar club (a local welfare organization), said Afzal is very sincere in his work and inspiration for others, especially the challenged ones like him.

Shafi Ahmed Solman, chairman of Kulaura Upazila Parishad, said, “Although physically challenged, Afzal is mentally very strong and does his work diligently.”
