

T-SHIRTS/TOPS

Keep in mind that the Aztec or any other indigenous motif inspired look can very easily translate from boho-chic sort to refined and sleek. There are plenty of options to choose from, such as off-shoulders, to semi-casual shirts, and even tops with batwing sleeves — they look best when paired with your favourite pair of pants, let that be denims or cotton pants (with self-print also works). Just make sure the pants do not have any crazy patterns on them, or embellishments.

As an evening look, pair a T-shirt in a similar pattern with slim fit pants and a fitted black formal jacket, or even one with padded shoulders, golden hoops and your favourite pair of sexy black stilettos.

There are also great T-shirt options for men as well in tribal prints, which when coupled with a simple pair of your favourite ripped jeans, messy hair and a stubble to give off those Rastafarian vibes.

SHRUGS

A personal favourite, nothing says fun and flirty like an ethnic inspired geometric patterned shrug that goes great with dresses, pants and even kurtis, if styled the right way. Yes, you heard it right! Simple white kurta/anarkali (with minimal embellishments), or even another complementing colour (just make sure it is in a solid tone), paired with jeans, leggings or slim pants in either black or white and a short-waisted length shrug and kolapuris to match it.

A hint of silver or oxidised accessories, either on the ears or wrist and voila! The next fashionista has arrived. Pair knee length shrugs with something more western like dresses or pants.

PANTS/LEGGINGS

Nothing beats a great pair of printed pants that too tribal inspired. Mix and match it, or as a contrast, pair it with your favourite crop top or halter blouse. A safe bet is to opt for black and white patterned pants with tribal motifs that can be paired with the humble white, or black top or even a bright/neon hued blouse.

Just remember to make sure the top part is kept as a plain as possible. Another fun option, which is not only restricted for vacationing only, is to pair a tribal pattern inspired jumpsuit, accessorised with a statement piece (only) around the neck or ears.
