

BOND TO DIE?

The twenty-fifth James Bond movie, which may as well be Daniel Craig's last venture as James Bond, finally has a title. It was announced that the film will be called No Time to Die, although the previous title was Bond 25. The movie, which was initially being directed by Danny Boyle, is now being directed by Cary Fukunaga, as the former left the project due to creative differences. According to reports, the film was delayed by six months due to Danny leaving. The plot revolves around how James Bond is leading a retired life in Jamaica, but is forced to come out of retirement when his old CIA friend, Felix Leiter shows up asking for his help. No Time to Die is set to hit theatres on April 3, 2020, in the UK.

.....
Source: Internet

GULZAR'S NEW FILM

Fans of poet, lyricist and director Gulzar will finally be able to watch his unreleased film from 1988, Libaas, which will be released as a tribute to him on his 83rd birthday. The film, which has been based on the short story, Seema, written by the director himself, will star actors such as Naseeruddin Shah, Shabana Azmi, Raj Babbar, Sushma Seth, Utpal Dutt, Annu Kapoor and Savita Bajaj. Amul Vikas Mohan and Anshul Vikas Mohan will be completing their father, Vikas Mohan's unfinished project by producing the film. Libaas tells the story of a theatre director and his wife, an actor, whose lives seem to be perfect to the media, but is quite different in reality. The film, which is to be released at the end of this year, will be distributed by Zee Studios.

.....
Source: Internet

SHAKING IT OFF

Singer Taylor Swift recently opened up about her very public beef with Kanye West and his wife Kim Kardashian, which took place back in 2016. The whole Kanye-Taylor beef started after the former released the song, Famous, which featured derogatory lyrics about Taylor. When Taylor called out Kanye on it, Kim released videos which proved that Taylor had actually given Kanye permission to use those lyrics. Additionally, Kim also compared Taylor to a snake on Twitter. In a recent interview, the Bad Blood singer revealed how she felt isolated when the drama spewed all over social media. She said, "A mass public shaming, with millions of people saying you are quote-unquote cancelled, is a very isolating experience, I don't think there are that many people who can actually understand what it's like to have millions of people hate you very loudly."

.....
Source: Internet