

It's all red and black

After her sacrifice in Avengers: Endgame, the Russian assassin turned avenger, Natasha Romanoff aka Black Widow gets a standalone movie. Ever since the announcement of the making of the film, Marvel fans have been eagerly awaiting a trailer. To keep their excitement alive, the first movie of Marvel Phase 4 finally gets a visual representation. The first official poster, made by artist Andy Park was revealed at Disney's D23 Expo, where we can see Black Widow in a brand new suit and hairstyle. Standing on either side of Scarlett in the red and black poster, we see Yelena Belova (Pugh), Red Guardian (Harbour) and Melina Vostokoff (Weisz). The film is being directed by Australian director, Cate Shortland, and is set to hit theatres on May 1, 2020. The fans surely have a long wait ahead of them until they get to see the origin story of one of their favourite avengers.

Source: Internet

GRAPEVINE

Send in the clowns

The notorious clown, better known as the Joker is back again to tease everyone with a brand-new trailer. With the movie being released on October 4, 2019, the new trailer was a way to keep the hype alive. This time, viewers get a closer look into the life of Arthur Fleck, a struggling stand-up comedian, whose personal trauma and disregard from the society makes him crumble and reincarnate as the clown prince of crime. The clip is followed by the first look of Thomas Wayne (Brett Cullen), Batman's father, as well as more on Robert De Niro playing the talk show host, Murray Franklin, who makes fun of Arthur's stand-up routine on TV. By the end of the trailer, Arthur is seen in his Joker make-up, ready to go on air at Franklin's show. Joker, which has been directed by Todd Phillips, has already received a standing ovation after it's recent premiere at the Venice Film Festival.

Source: Internet

PARINEETI on the Train

The first look for the Hindi remake of the film, The Girl on the Train was released on August 20, 2019. The film, which will share the same name as the original, features Parineeti Chopra, and is produced by Reliance Entertainment. As for the first look for the film, two pictures of Parineeti were released, both showing very different sides of her character. The first showed her sitting in a bathtub with a dazed expression and a wound on her forehead. The second showed her wearing a black pant-suit, staring into the camera with a menacing glare. Directed by Ribhu Dasgupta, the film also stars Aditi Rao Hydari and Kirti Kulhari. Even though an official release date for the film hasn't been announced yet, the filmmakers are targeting a 2020 release.

Source: Internet