

Service among the stars

Kanye West's Sunday Service has been visited by a lot of celebs of the likes of Katy Perry, Orlando Bloom, Kourtney and Khloe Kardashian, Kendall Jenner and Stevie Mackey. The newest addition to the list is Brad Pitt. The actor was pictured embracing Kanye over the Labour Day weekend, during his Sunday Service on 1st September in Watts, California. He rested his left hand on West's shoulder, as the two shared a private conversation over a few smiles. West's Sunday Service took place in the parking lot of a church, according to fan videos online. Brad's presence was a surprise to church-goers, although, this wasn't the actor's first time at West's annual event.

Source: Internet

Kicking off

Eid

After the shelving of Salman Khan's film, Inshallah for Eid 2020, there have been speculations that he will release another film, Kick 2, as an Eid surprise. Now, however, Sajid Nadiadwala has revealed that the script for Kick 2 is not ready yet, and the film will not be released on Eid 2020. He said, "The news came because I had gone to Salman's, he asked how much I am ready, I told him I have written one draft and I would need four to six months to rewrite the draft, dialogues. I would be ready with the script by Eid." Regardless of this, Salman is adamant about bringing something new for his fans, according to his team.

Source: Internet

