So, let's not waste any more time and get to know this Dhaka stunner in our exclusive interview.

What do you consider yourself first — a writer or an entrepreneur?

Both actually! I always wanted to do something worthwhile with my life. A while back, I used to blog regularly, addressing almost all social concerns that I felt strongly about. So if you want to know what describes me best — I'd probably use the term 'writer' — that's me!

But over time, I have also learnt to become a competent entrepreneur. I'd probably give all the credit to my artistic sixth sense that helped me develop a worthy edge.
