These small cylindrical objects, tied to the branches of a tree, are actually traps to catch fish. With boat-load of these traps -- made of bamboo and plastic -- fishers head out to Tanguar Haor and put them in the water. They said they have been catching small fish this way for generations. But often, they leave the empty or used traps in the water, which is not only polluting the haor, but also harmful for aquatic life. The photo was taken from Sreepur of Sunamganj on Tuesday.

Prof Ajoy Roy in critical condition

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Renowned academic Professor Ajoy Roy, father of slain blogger Avijit Roy, is in critical condition.

He is on artificial ventilation support at the capital's BIRDEM hospital.

Members of Ekattorer Ghatok Dalal Nirmul Committee, a platform formed in 1992 to raise voice for the trial of war criminals, yesterday visited the ailing professor at the hospital.

A founder of Nirmul Committee, Ajoy Roy played a key role in the movement for trial of war criminals. He is now one of the advisers of the committee.

Prof Areef Ahsan, Intensive Care Unit in-charge of BIRDEM, said, "He [Ajoy Roy] was admitted to the hospital on November 25 with fever and difficulty in breathing. His health condition has been deteriorating from November 27 evening, and he was moved to ICU that night."

Replying to a query, Areef said Ajoy Roy's condition remains unchanged.

"Taking him abroad for treatment is also not possible," he said.

Nirmul Committee President Shahriar Kabir urged Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina to take necessary steps for better treatment of the veteran educationist.

While testifying last month before a magistrate court -- in his son's murder case -- the 85-year-old professor, out of frustration, said he would not continue appearing for the hearings.

"I cannot come to the court again and again. I am an old man," said a feeble Ajoy Roy who had to be carried to the courtroom in a chair.

Army chief's Myanmar visit to 'open another line of negotiations': Momen

UNB, Dhaka

Foreign Minister Dr AK Abdul Momen on Wednesday said the scheduled visit of the army chief to Myanmar will be good for Bangladesh, and "open another line of negotiation" between the two countries over Rohingya repatriation.

"We want to resolve it [Rohingya crisis] through discussions. I think it [the visit] will go in favour of us. It'll be good for us," he told reporters at the state guesthouse Padma.

Dr Momen said Myanmar is not Bangladesh's enemy but a friend, and in Myanmar, their army plays a very significant role.

In this situation, he said, it will be good for Bangladesh if Army Chief General Aziz Ahmed goes there.

The army chief recently said he will go to Myanmar next month where they will discuss issues relating to improving relationship between the two countries.

Many issues will come up and they may talk about the Rohingya issue, but whatever happens, it will be in the interest of Bangladesh, he had said.

The foreign minister on Wednesday said Myanmar created the Rohingya problem, and its solution depends on them too.

He said they remain engaged on all fronts, and expect a solution to Rohingya crisis through negotiation and discussion.

'RELOCATION PROCESS TO BHASAN CHAR STILL ON'

Asked whether the government has postponed the Rohingya relocation plan to Bhasan Char, the foreign minister said, "Surely, it has not stopped. Our process is still ongoing."

He said Bhasan char relocation plan is a temporary arrangement, as the existing Rohingya camp is overcrowded with risk of landslides and subsequent deaths.

"We won't force anybody to go there. Any relocation will be voluntary in nature. We wanted to relocate them there for their betterment and avoid risk or reduce risk," Dr Momen added.

The government has already developed Bhasan Char island to accommodate some 1,00,000 Rohingyas.

The owner and two staffers of a rehabilitation centre in Mirpur upazila of Kushtia were sent to jail yesterday after police arrested them on charge of providing wrong treatment and mercilessly beating a college student who eventually died.

Police on Wednesday night arrested Samarpan rehabilitation centre owner Abdul Matin (54), its supervisor Habib Uddin Malitha (52) and staffer Mintu Hossain (26).

The chief judicial magistrate's court in Kushtia sent all three to jail after police produced them before the court.

The deceased is Kamruzzaman Imon (19), an honours student of Rajshahi City College. He died on November 20.

"After interrogation, the arrestees said they injected Imon with sedatives to control him," said Abul Kalam, officer-in-charge of Mirpur Police Station, adding that they did not consult a registered physician for doing so and there was no full-time doctor to operate and supervise the centre.

Although Imon's family always claimed that he never took drugs, officials at the centre strongly believed otherwise, the OC said, relaying information extracted during interrogation.

"We strongly suspect that wrong treatment was the cause of his death," he said, adding that the autopsy report will make it clear.
