

GRAPEVINE

FINALLY DIVORCED!

The spark of romance between actor Channing Tatum and singer Jessie J spread all over the internet in October, last year. Interestingly, within a few weeks of the news, Tatum and now ex-wife Jenna Dewan decided to file their divorce papers. Dewan said she was shocked to learn about the Channing-Jessie romance via the internet. She wrote in a recent memoir, "I was learning things about my ex most people wouldn't have to face – and over the internet, as it was happening. There I was, on a plane, alone, finding out about his new relationship. I felt blindsided." However, Jenna has moved on, and is soon expecting a baby with her new boyfriend, actor Kazeem. It only makes sense for the couple to officially pen down their separation. Now, after a year-and-a-half of Channing and Jenna's separation, the couple are finally divorced.

Breaking the Patriotism

Actor John Abraham has been delivering consecutive nationalistic projects, like Romeo Akbar Walter, RAW, Batla House and so on. Finally, John has decided to move on and work with a different genre. He was recently seen on Anees Bazmee's comedy drama, Pagalpanti, alongside actor Anil Kapoor. However, the film did have some patriotic touches. Regarding a film sequence, the director said, "It was a very big challenge. Patriotism is a serious matter whereas my film's genre is the exact opposite. It took me a lot of time. It's one of the very important scenes in the film which will give goosebumps to every Indian. At the same time, it'll also make you laugh. It is a one of its kind sequence. I don't think any other film has had such a scene ever!" The movie was released on November 21, 2019.

Bruised for real

Many actors are known to do their own stunts. Catwoman star, Halle Berry, is one of them. Recently, while doing a stunt for her upcoming film, Bruised, the actor got injured. She sustained the injuries while shooting a fight scene for her new MMA-inspired film. The actor posted a still from the film on Instagram and captioned it, "Thank you to all the folks that have showered me with love since my injury. It's par for the course when you do your own stunts, and I wouldn't have it any other way. Just know I'm far from tired. I'm wide awake... and just getting started! #BruisedTheMovie."
