The evergreen locks

Some hairstyles come and go, while others remain a classic. Celebrities are mostly behind the timeless popularity behind each. In fact, it's sensational how these hairstyles have withstood the test of time, and are continuing to do so in this modern age of fluctuating fashion.

When it comes to fashionably cute haircuts, pixie is the shortest you can go. It makes you look playful while retaining a feminine aspect. Mia Farrow is popularly known for bringing pixie cuts to the fore; she's singlehandedly responsible for all the ladies flocking to salons to get this dream cut.

Adding a few inches to the pixie, we achieve the ever-sought-after 'Diana Cut'. Ever since the world's favourite Princess Diana channelled this hairstyle, it has locked its position onto the evergreen lists.

Michelle Obama's cut, which features a bob with straight, silky hair, is known for enhancing her aura of confidence and elegance. It has become a classic ever since!

Similar to hers, but a blonde and sultry version, would be Marilyn Monroe's dreamy curls. This is one of the most iconic hairstyles in history and has become a symbol of Monroe's bold attitude.

Staying on the same wavelength, we have Victoria Beckham's asymmetric bob. This haircut brings a modern edge to the age-old bob, and looks very high-fashion. Textured bob is also a hairstyle to go for if you are bored of the typical plain, straight locks. A little longer in length would be Jennifer Aniston's haircut from the popular TV show 'Friends' — the 'Rachel Cut' has stayed a favourite ever since.

Hair of a length below the shoulder is even more versatile to style. A '70s vintage classic would be Farrah Fawcett's feathery flipped curls. It flattered her blondes even more, and was almost the only trending hairstyle at one point. Though this look is not as popular anymore, celebrities revamp it every now and then and it comes back on the trend-scene.

A talk of popular hairstyles is unthinkable without mentioning Blake Lively's famous layered messy look. It has been so greatly adored because of how naturally chic it looks while sporting a fun and flirty vibe. Soft curls are always in style. Celebrities such as Leighton Meester have mastered this look and turned it into a trending mode for good. Beachy waves are currently on the uptrend due to how effortless they look. The textured curls of this hairstyle, as seen on hundreds of celebrities, really bring out the seductive side of you.

When it comes to up-dos, a messy bun is a no-brainer. It complements every outfit and always looks stylish. Ballerina bun is the most common and classic. On the other hand, sleek-back hair, mostly popularised by Kim Kardashian, is another statement look. Different types of braids are trending lately as well. The easier ones such as fishtails, French or Dutch braids look voguish while remaining forever on-trend.
