Ramgarh UNO ANM Badruddoza's actions went viral recently on social media where it was revealed that he, on behalf of a cooperative, took lease of 18 acres of land in the upazila -- including five acres of khas land -- for a period of 30 years.

"Since 2003, khas land settlement for personal interest was completely stopped in Chattogram Hill Tracts following a circular of the CHT affairs ministry," said Pratap Chandra Biswas, deputy commissioner of Khagrachhari district.

Contacted, UNO Badruddoza said, "We took 18 acres of land, including five acres of khas land, from locals in the area in the name of Friends Fund Shomobay Samity for 30 years on April 1 this year.

"I am a member of the Samity and the other fourteen members are my friends."

Badruddoza, a BCS cadre from the 29th BCS, joined his current posting in Khagrachhari on February 23 this year, according to the local government website.

He took the lease at Tk 10 lakh, according to the documents obtained by this newspaper.

The UNO also allegedly installed a government solar-powered panel for his personal use and levelled a hill to make a road on the land last month.

Md Saiful Islam, a local journalist who visited the site, said, "The UNO razed a hill with an excavator around a month ago and had been using a government solar-

Bangladeshis arrested in Malaysia

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Malaysian Immigration Department has reportedly busted a "document forgery" ring and nabbed four of its members, including three Bangladeshi men.

One of the Bangladeshis, aged 39, was claimed to be the "mastermind" of the ring, who would earn between RM 8,000 and RM 10,000 a month from the forged documents.

The syndicate was crippled following two months of surveillance.

Malaysian English-language daily The Star yesterday ran a report on its online version on the incident, after the country's national news agency Bernama ran a similar report on Friday.

None of the reports, however, mentioned names and details of the Bangladeshi suspects.

Grey reef sharks form long-term friendships

MAIL ONLINE

Sharks have a reputation for being heartless killers, but at least one species forms long-lasting "friendships," scientists have discovered.

Grey reef sharks are swift, large-eyed predators that frequent coral reefs in the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

They often head out to the open water at night to hunt. But during the day, they return to the same spot on their reef, congregating in clusters of up to 20 individuals.

To study this social behaviour, marine biologists at Florida International University tagged 41 grey reef sharks near the Palmyra Atoll, a remote Pacific island more than 1,000 miles from the coast of Hawaii.

2nd virus wave threatens Europe

S Korea reports spike in cases as NY museums, galleries to reopen from Aug 24

AGENCIES

British holidaymakers returning home from parts of Europe began having to quarantine under new restrictions yesterday, as a second wave of virus infections threatened more disruption and economic chaos on the continent.

The UK opted to remove France, the Netherlands, Malta and several other countries from its list of places exempt from self-isolation rules, sparking a rush for plane, train and ferry tickets by Britons desperate to get back before the 0300 GMT change.

All travellers arriving from the three countries -- as well as Monaco, and Caribbean island states Turks & Caicos and Aruba -- after the deadline must quarantine for 14 days.

French student Antoine, 23, cut short his holiday to rush back to Bristol, in southwestern England, where he is at university.

"I'm a waiter in a small cafe near college, I can't afford to spend 14 days in the house," he said at London's St Pancras railway station after arriving on a Eurostar train.

France is facing a resurgence of the disease that emerged in China late last year and has so far infected over 21 million people and killed more than 766,000 globally.

French authorities have reported more than 2,500 new cases on each of the past three days -- levels not seen since May.

Meanwhile Germany added most of Spain -- where cases have also surged in recent weeks -- to its list of regions from where arrivals must show a negative Covid-19 test or quarantine for two weeks.
