

Relief 'embezzler' wins award for service to poor

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Brahmanbaria

A local Awami League leader widely criticised for misappropriating rice meant for poor people has won an award for making "special contributions to social service".

Shah Alam, industries and commerce affairs secretary of Brahmanbaria AL, was awarded by the Department of Social Services on National Social Services Day 2021 on Saturday.

Photos of him receiving the award from the deputy commissioner in the presence of other officials and local dignitaries went viral on Facebook yesterday.

Amid criticisms, Deputy Commissioner Hayat-ud-Dowla Khan wrote a letter yesterday evening, asking Deputy Director Masudul Hasan Taposh of the social services department to explain in 24 hours how Alam got nominated for the award.

The deputy commissioner told The Daily Star that he simply handed over the award because Alam was nominated by the social services department.

People expressed shock as it was only in April 2020 that Alam's dealership of the government's Open Market Sales (OMS) programme got cancelled after an investigation found that he added the names of his wife, daughter, and several relatives on the list of beneficiaries who are supposed to be poor people hit hard by the lockdown.

On April 1, 2020, the government announced that it would sell rice at a subsidised rate of Tk 10 a kg to beggars, transport workers, rickshaw pullers, labourers, street vendors and transgender people.

Alam used his power as an OMS dealer, who is in charge of distributing the rice in different neighbourhoods of

He refuses to grant the status of a "political party" to the opponents of the present government. He makes his point saying the parties who are now clamouring for an all-party government had the security money of their candidates forfeited in the last elections.

New curbs as nations fight resurgent virus

S Korea says third wave of Covid being contained

AGENCIES

Countries across the world tightened restrictions on their populations yesterday to fight a resurgence in the coronavirus, as the European Union offered to help drug companies expand vaccine production to improve distribution "bottlenecks".

From local curfews to alcohol bans and complete lockdowns, governments are trying to tackle a surge in cases.

The coronavirus has killed more than 1.8 million people globally since emerging in China in December 2019, according to a tally from official sources compiled by AFP.

But experts fear the worst is yet to come, predicting a sharp rise in infections and deaths after weeks of holiday gatherings.

French police booked hundreds of New Year revellers for flouting anti-Covid measures at an illegal rave.

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson said yesterday he was "reconciled" to the prospect of tougher restrictions to combat spiralling coronavirus cases, as a row flared over whether schools should reopen.

"It may be that we need to do things in the next few weeks that will be tougher in many parts of the country," Johnson told the BBC's The Andrew Marr Show.

"I'm fully, fully reconciled to that." Britain recorded 57,725 new cases on Saturday, its highest total of the entire pandemic.
