Wasa MD advises city corporations

In order to solve the capital's perennial waterlogging problem which Dhaka Wasa has failed to do, its managing director yesterday said the two city corporations should now focus on protecting natural reservoirs and not just rely on the artificial drainage systems.

On December 31, 2020, the capital's city corporations formally took over management and maintenance responsibilities of 26 canals, storm-water drains and 10 kilometres of box culverts from Dhaka Wasa, raising hopes that the city's longstanding waterlogging problems would be solved.

Addressing a press conference at Wasa's conference room, its Managing Director Taqsem A Khan said water bodies should constitute 12 percent of a city's area but Dhaka is now depending mainly on artificial drainage systems.

REUTERS, Beijing

Alibaba founder Jack Ma's absence from public view in the past two months, including missing the final episode of a TV show on which he was to appear as a judge, has fueled social media speculation over his whereabouts amid a Chinese regulatory clampdown on his sprawling business empire.

China's highest-profile entrepreneur has not appeared in a public setting since a late October forum in Shanghai where he blasted China's regulatory system in a speech that put him on a collision course with officials, resulting in the suspension of a $37 billion IPO of Alibaba's Ant Group
