It has the whole setup -- a basin, a faucet, a soap dish and the plumbing to connect it to a drain outlet and to a water tank. But the hand wash outlet, installed by Pirojpur Zila Parishad, beside the BRTC counter near CO Office intersection in Pirojpur town, now lies covered with filth and in an unusable condition without any supply of clean water and soap. COVID-19 HAND WASH OUTLETS

Money spent on installation, not on maintenance

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Pirojpur

Like everywhere else in the country, the hand wash basins, set up in Pirojpur town when the first wave of Covid-19 struck the country last year, are lying in neglect.

When those were installed, many people did not wish to use those simply out of lack of awareness. But now, when more of them are aware of the benefits of washing hands frequently, the wash basins are left unclean and without necessary supplies -- clean water and soap.

Many of the basins now are either damaged or so dirty that touching those might even cause health risks to the public.

Many government and private offices throughout a good part of last year did not allow visitors to enter the office premises without washing their hands at the wash basins set up outside the offices.

But later, when the number of novel coronavirus infections gradually fell across the country, most offices eventually stopped making their visitors wash hands prior to making entry.

With a second wave of the virus waiting to break out, this correspondent tried to locate the hand wash facilities that were installed last year at public places around Pirojpur town, especially at government offices or hospitals.

But, none of those were found to be in a condition recommended by health experts.

The wash basins installed on the premises of Pirojpur Sadar Upazila Parishad and Pirojpur District Hospital had water supply, but did not have any soap.

A hand wash outlet, installed by Pirojpur Zila Parishad, beside the BRTC counter near CO Office intersection, bore all indications that it had never been cleaned. A large water tank was connected to it, but there was no water in the tank or any soap on the soap dish.

Many townspeople this correspondent spoke with said many of the residents of the town now feel that they no longer need to wash hands before entering an office.

But the ones who still want to continue the practice for the sake of public safety, are in no luck as there is not a single operational hand wash outlet in the entire town, they said frustratingly.

Shahidul Islam, a resident of the town, said, "Although we washed our hands several times a day when the Coronavirus first broke out, we had to stop the practice as no hand wash facilities are found to be operational in the town anymore."

Hand wash outlets must be cleaned and maintained properly so the general public would be enticed into using those, said Obydul Haque, another resident of the town.

Ishtiaq Ahmed, a medical officer at Pirojpur District Hospital, said, "Hand washing is the best way to protect us from different diseases" and people should get used to continuing this practice.

Contacted, Rebeka Khan, chief executive officer of Pirojpur Zila Parishad, said as part of an emergency measure, they installed the hand wash outlets at key locations in every upazila to ensure access to hand wash facilities for the general public.

Even though they "have no funds for its maintenance", they have asked the upazila parishads, if necessary, to send bills of expenses spent for the maintenance of the hand wash outlets installed by the zila parishad.

A bailey bridge on Kalihati-Dhalapara-Barachaona road in Nondakuri area under Birbasinda union in Kalihati upazila has remained badly damaged for long, causing untold sufferings to its users as well as hampering the movement of traffic.

The severely damaged bridge on a local waterbody has virtually turned into a death trap for commuters.

Locals said different goods-laden trucks, passenger carrying vehicles and pedestrians cross the vulnerable bridge, constructed on a river pass between Kasturipara and Razafair, risking their lives.

Due to the dilapidated condition of the bridge fatal accidents can occur any moment, locals added.

During a recent visit to the area this correspondent saw that the steel plates on a large portion of the deck have caved in due to heavy pressure of vehicles.

Villagers said alongside the pedestrians, various light vehicles including pick-up vans, CNG-run three-wheelers, battery-run easy bikes and motorcycles ply the damaged bridge taking risk of accidents.

Several hundred vehicles, carrying passengers and goods, from Kalihati upazila headquarters use the damaged bridge every day to go to Borochoana, Dhalapara and Deopara villages in Sakhipur and Ghatail upazilas and several other villages in Kalihati upazila.

Mohammad Ali of Razafair village said they are forced to use the vulnerable bridge as there is no alternative.

Despite repeated appeals for long the authorities concerned are yet to repair the damaged bridge, he added.

Saheb Ali, an easy-bike driver who drive his vehicle on the risky bridge every day, said fear grips him while moving the damaged portion of bridge.

"We have no other alternative, but to cross the bridge risking our lives to go to the destinations," he said.

Three-wheeler driver Aminur said as thousands of passengers and hundreds of vehicles ply the bridge every day, the authorities concerned should repair the damaged portion of the bridge immediately.

"Condition of the bridge is so dilapidated that vehicle can fall into the river at any time," one of the commuters Atiqul Islam said.

Kalihati Upazila Engineer of Local Government and Engineering Department (LGED) Zahir Mehedi Hasan said all the four bailey bridges, including the damaged one, were previously under the Roads and Highways Department which were later handed over to LGED.

"Works to repair the damage bridge will begin next week," the engineer said.

Initiative to construct concrete bridges in place of the worn out bridges will be taken as soon as possible, he said.

This recent photo shows pedestrians and vehicles cross the damaged portion of this bailey bridge on Kalihati-Dhalapara-Barachaona road in Tangail's Kalihati upazila amid risk of fatal accidents.
