demanded Tk 35,000 as "speed money" for every consignment in addition to the bribe for concealing the actual weight of goods in the release documents, said the C&F agent proprietor.

"We informed senior customs officials but no remedy has been found till now," he added.

"Rather, the rate of bribery [per consignment] has been increased from Tk 1 lakh to Tk 1.5 lakh after the complaints. As a result, some corrupt C&F agents are taking advantage and hiding the actual weight [of goods] to evade duty.

"We don't know why the customs authorities did not take action against those officials and C&F agents, even after getting proof of the allegations. Those involved are still working in the U-baggage section without any official action taken against them."

Sheikh Salahuddin, an importer, said in an official complaint sent to the Customs House on December 15 last year: "In the last one year, 2,500 consignments were released from the port under U-baggage rules hiding actual information in the release documents.

"Joint Commissioner Mahbub Hasan has taken Tk 1.5 lakh per consignment to hide the actual invoices and the bribe was transacted through his office assistant Md Daud."

To help verify the allegation, the importer also provided a total of 250 bill of lading numbers with his complaint.

The Daily Star managed to collect documents on four consignments from those against the 250 bill of lading numbers in the official complaint; irregularities were found in three of them.

Although a total of 5,300kg of goods were shown in the three master bills of lading -- SACQ0129844, SACQ0129627, SACQ0129613 -- only 2,500kg of goods were shown in the release documents.

So, more than 2,800kg of goods in these three consignments were released by the C&F agent Spread Link without any customs duty being paid.

The consignments came from Saudi Arabia and the documents showed old refrigerators, charger lights, fans, blankets, and washing machines as their contents.

Regarding these allegations, Customs Commissioner Fakhru told The Daily Star recently, "Surveillance has been stepped up on existing consignments which are awaiting release from the port yard following the allegations and we found forgeries in all these."

"However," he said, "it can't be said without investigating that the same forgery happened in consignments previously released from the port."

He added, "We have set up two inquiry committees to look into whether there were any similar irregularities in those consignments. After the investigation, we will take action against them."

Contacted in mid-December, Joint Commissioner Mahbub Hasan said there was no scope for customs duty on goods to be given lower than that specified in the documents. "I have no idea how it happened," he added.

He also denied the allegation of bribery.

WHAT EXPATS, C&F AGENTS SAY

Abu Tayab, one of the four expatriates under whose names the consignments were shipped to Bangladesh, had lost his job because of the pandemic and was broke towards the end of 2020.

In these circumstances, through a friend named Shafi Ullah, he was offered a ticket by officials of a Jeddah-based courier agency who said they would be shipping goods in his name and asked for his passport to do this. He accepted the deal.

While he took the free ticket home, he has no idea what unaccompanied baggage was and what its rules entailed.

Abu Tayab said Shafi himself cut a similar deal but he was also shipping some of his own items in addition to the courier's goods, and they flew to Bangladesh together.

Shafi Ullah could not be contacted but his brother Himel told this correspondent that Shafi never brought any goods though Chattogram Port and he returned to Saudi Arabia at the end of December.

The consignment under Abu Tayab's name was released by C&F agent Nahar Trading Company Limited from the port.

Asked about the allegation of commercial goods in his consignments being released under expatriates' names, Ahsanullah Talukder Rintu, proprietor of the C&F agent, said, "Some importers may use passports of expatriates to bring in commercial goods.

"In this case, we have nothing to do. We deliver the goods to those to whom the courier agent abroad asks us to do."

Rintu, however, denied allegations of irregularities in the customs documents and bribing customs officials.

"If such irregularities occur, shipping agents and freight forwarding agents must be involved. Such irregularities are not possible without the involvement of officials of the other two C&F agents," he said.

Proprietor of the C&F agent Amin Brothers, Mohammad Fazlu, told The Daily Star, "It is true that for every consignment of U-baggage, a bribe has to be paid in the name of speed money."

However, he claimed that before releasing the goods, customs officials had checked all the consignments and they had no scope to release products by showing a lower weight in the documents.

When this correspondent further asked him about the alleged irregularities, he said he would explain later but did not answer despite repeated phone calls afterwards.

This correspondent attempted to contact the proprietor of Spread Link, Md Amirul, and an office assistant of the Customs House, Md Daud, but they did not respond to repeated calls.

FAULTS IN THE SYSTEM

To release imported goods from the port, a letter of credit (LC), paperwork of the imported goods and other documents including details of the exporter are required.

However, these documents are not required in the case of U-baggage, as these goods are mainly for expatriates' use.

Customs sources said it is not possible to identify the irregularities by looking at the documents due to expatriates submitting the house BL and bill of entry separately when they take delivery of the goods.

Using this opportunity, C&F agents are releasing additional goods with the help of the customs officials concerned.

Customs sources said such irregularities can be detected if the authorities make it mandatory to specify the expatriates' names and the quantity of goods when they submit both the IGM (Import General Manifest) and the Bill of Entry in the Customs server.

"I volunteered to take the vaccine, hoping to dispel the misconception about vaccination," she told The Daily Star.

The government conducted the two-day piloting of the vaccine before launching the mass inoculation on February 7.

Officials said none of the 567 people, who volunteered to take the shots, have shown any adverse impacts so far. They would be observed for seven days.

Shamsul Haque, member secretary of the vaccination committee at the health directorate, said, "We were afraid that someone would suffer a severe allergic shock about 15-30 minutes after taking the shot. But there was no such case."

This correspondent talked to a dozen people, who got the shot, and excepting a few, who had a temperature, everyone said they were fine.

Ahmed Lutful Moben, associate professor of medicine, said he was not feeling any adverse effects and had been performing his usual hospital duties.

"After taking the vaccine, I worked at the hospital and drove home. I inoculated about 100 of my colleagues the next day. I am fine," he told The Daily Star yesterday.

The pain where the needle was pushed is "ignorable", he added.

The five hospitals where the two-day piloting took place were Dhaka Medical College Hospital, Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujib Medical University (BSMMU), Kurmitola General Hospital, Kuwait Bangladesh Friendship Hospital, and Mugda Medical College Hospital.

Officials at the hospitals said a few of the vaccine recipients had mild fever.

Doctor Moben said, "It is quite normal. It means the vaccine is developing immunity in the body."

Prof Mamun Al Mahtab Swapnil and his wife Associate Prof Nuzhat Chowdhury both took the shots at the BSMMU on Thursday.

Prof Swapnil told this correspondent that he and his wife felt no adverse effect whatsoever.

"Since taking the shots, my wife and I have been seeing patients and went to talk-shows. Some of my colleagues at the hospital also told me that they were absolutely fine," he said.

Frontline health workers, several politicians, government officials, and civil society members, have taken the job on the second day of the piloting.

"We are lucky to have the vaccine early. Many countries are still struggling to get the shots. We should not miss the opportunity," Prof Swapnil said.

"We have come to know that the factory was run by one Md Nizam Khan. On Thursday night, he fired a shot targeting another man following an altercation with him over the recent Chattogram City Corporation elections. The bullet did not hit the target.

Officer-in-Charge Mohammed Mohsin of Double Mooring Police Station said, "From the design of the firearms and weapon-making equipment, it is evident that Nizam is a fierce criminal."

"Nizam is on the run and police were trying to arrest him," said the OC.

The law enforcers arrested his wife Meherunnesha Mukta, 39, for her alleged links with running the factory, said police.

"REACHING THE LIMIT" Cases have soared past 101 million worldwide, and despite the rollout of vaccines, the fight has been further complicated by the emergence of more contagious variants first detected in Britain, Brazil and South Africa.

American biotech firm Novavax said Thursday that its vaccine showed an overall efficacy of 89.3 percent in a major British clinical trial, and was highly effective against the variant first detected there.

But other results showed it offered significantly less protection against the South African strain.

Mozambique's President Filipe Nyusi has warned that warned hospitals across southern Africa are "rapidly reaching the limit of their capacities", in part down to the new variant, reports AFP.

"When the sun would set, it would be dreadful for the women in the camps. We would not be able to move around. Women are highly unsafe in the camps," she added.

The Bangladesh Navy has undertaken the Tk 3,100 crore project, titled Ashrayan-3 Project, on the island to provide shelter to the refugees.

On the Char, the buildings are equipped with electricity, solar panels, biogas plants, and mobile networks.

The houses have been built four feet above the ground with concrete blocks. Each building will house 16 families of four in its 16 rooms, providing more than the UN stipulated 37 square feet per person, project officials said.

The United Nations and other development partners, however, expressed concerns and demanded independent assessments of the project before the relocation.

The UN and rights groups have been questioning the relocation plan, saying the island was prone to floods and could be submerged during high tides.

town, said Gautam Kumar Biswas, superintendent of police (SP) of PBI in Mymensingh, at a press briefing yesterday.

On November 8 last year, Sabina was asked to prepare breakfast for guests. But when she could not due to illness, the couple tortured her severely, which led to her death, the officer said.

The couple then put the body inside a suitcase and dumped it in a canal, he added.

Locals found the suitcase the next day by the Mymensingh-Kishoreganj road.

A case was filed with Gauripur Police Station on November 11.

The SP said a prescription found in the suitcase led them to the suspects.

"At one stage in our investigation into the seizure list, we found an old prescription of Zakir in the luggage. The investigation started from this source," the SP said.

"After the arrest, the couple admitted to the crime," he added.

Sabina's parents demanded exemplary punishment of the killers.

Talking to reporters, Sabina's father Sirajul Islam Siru of the Ujan Ghagra area said the accused rarely allowed him or his wife to meet their daughter.

"Even after her death, they [Sabina's employers] didn't tell us anything. We came to know about it on Wednesday after police informed us," the father said.

SP Gautam added that the law enforcers are investigating if anyone else was involved in the incident.
