

MURDER OF SUNAMGANJ FISHERMAN

Family fears unfair probe

Alleges MP, his brothers involved; lawmaker denies

DWOHA CHOWDHURY, Sylhet

The family of Shyamacharan Barman, a fisherman brutally murdered in Sunamganj's Dharmapasha upazila last month, fear they will not get justice as they say a local lawmaker is influencing the case.

On January 7, Shyamacharan, 65, was killed by a group of attackers allegedly in a dispute over fishing in a local waterbody and his family members allege local lawmaker Sunamganj-1 MP Mouazzam Hossain Ratan and his three brothers were behind this.

But police did not accept the case which named Ratan and his three brothers the following day. Later, on January 10, Sub-inspector Ariful Islam filed a case with the station accusing 60 to 65 unnamed persons over Shyamacharan's murder.

On January 14, Shyamacharan's son Chandan Barman went to Dharmapasha Senior Judicial Magistrate's Court to file a case accusing 63 persons, including the MP and his brothers. However, the court put this on hold as a police case had already been filed earlier.

The court said a decision on whether or not the case will be accepted will be made once the police submit its probe report.

A dispute had been ongoing in the area over Monai or Sunoi Jolmohal, as the local waterbody is called, which is part of a river in Dharmapasha upazila.

Myanmar's new government has written to Bangladesh, explaining why the military has taken power, Foreign Minister AK Abdul Momen said yesterday.

"They said 10.4 million fake votes were cast in the November elections and that they have a responsibility to have a fair election," he told reporters after an event at the Army Stadium yesterday.

From Bangladesh side, there was, however, no communication with Myanmar where the military took control of the country on February 1 through a coup and detention of de facto leader Aung San Suu Kyi and her political colleagues of the National League for Democracy.

AFP, Paris

Scientists have identified Earth's smallest known reptile, warning at the same time that sustained destruction of forests in northern Madagascar threatens its survival.

Tiny enough to perch comfortably on a fingertip, the ultra-compact chameleon -- dubbed Brookesia nana -- has the same proportions and world-weary expression as its larger cousins around the world.

"We discovered it in the mountains of northern of Madagascar," Frank Glaw, curator of herpetology at the Bavarian State Collection of Zoology, told AFP in an interview.

COVID VACCINATION

130 countries still to start

Says WHO chief; Spain limits use of AstraZeneca vaccine to people under 55; China approves Sinovac for public use

AFP, Geneva

The World Health Organization has called on vaccine makers to dramatically boost production, as US president Joe Biden warned the economic fallout from the coronavirus pandemic was pushing the United States towards "breaking point".

WHO chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus told reporters that while the number of Covid-19 vaccines administered (115 million) had now overtaken the number of infections worldwide (104 million), more than three-quarters of the jabs had been handed out in just 10 wealthy countries. "Almost 130 countries, with 2.5 billion people, are yet to administer a single dose", Tedros complained on Friday.

"Unless we suppress the virus everywhere, we could end up back at square one," the WHO chief said, calling on vaccine manufacturers to implement "a massive scale-up in production."

At the same time, Biden said he had to "act fast" to push a huge new economic relief package through Congress, because many Americans were near "breaking point."

The US, the world's biggest economy, is the country that has been hardest hit by the pandemic so far.

Out of the nearly 2.3 million people who have died from Covid-19 worldwide since the outbreak emerged in China in December 2019, the US has recorded more than 450,000 deaths.

"I see enormous pain in this country, a lot of folks out of work, a lot of folks going hungry," Biden said in a White House speech.
