Age bar brought down to 40 now

Govt does it to improve response

People aged 40 and above can now register for inoculation against Covid-19 as the health directorate found only a fraction of people eligible for the vaccine were responding to the campaign.

The original plan was to inoculate in the first phase the people aged 55 and above along with those belonging to certain groups of professionals.

But experts said that the bar should be lowered to 18 years and above if the authorities were to utilise as many vaccine doses as possible before they expired.

With 44,509 receiving the first shot of the Oxford-AstraZeneca vaccine yesterday, the number of people vaccinated against Covid-19 reached 75,669 in the first two days of the campaign.

The numbers are underwhelming as the government has the capability of vaccinating 3.60 lakh people a day.

In the last two days, a measly 2 percent of the government's first month's target of 35 lakh people have been reached. This target was also lowered from the original one of 60 lakh amid people's lukewarm response.

Over the last 11 days, around 5.12 lakh people have registered for the vaccine on www.surokkha.gov.bd.

The government's plan was to begin administering the second dose after two months, but this plan was also revised to one month.

"Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina in the cabinet meeting directed officials to include all people aged 40 years and above," cabinet secretary Khandker Anwarul Islam told reporters after the weekly cabinet meeting.

This directive will be in effect from today, he added.

The cabinet secretary also said people from other age groups would eventually be eligible for registration along with the family members of the frontline workers.

Along with her son Rezaur Rahman and his wife Farhana Hossain, 84-year-old Rizia Khatun, an osteoporosis patient, went to the capital's Mugda Medical College Hospital to take the Covid-19 vaccine yesterday.

Reaching there around 10:00am, from their home in Narinda, they did not find any attendant or wheelchair on their way to their destination -- the second floor of the hospital. They also could not find any elevator.

Holding hands of her son and daughter-in-law, Rizia then had to take the trouble of climbing the stairs to make it to the vaccination booth.

Many other elderly people, who went to the hospital for the shots, suffered the same way.

Govt not sincere in curbing graft

ACC chief also says most of its recommendations go unheeded

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Apart from investigating corruption allegations against individuals, the Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC) carries out enquiries into different government organisations and institutions to find out scopes of graft and make recommendations for the respective authorities accordingly to prevent these at source.

For instance, the practice of extending project deadlines at WASA, disregarding government orders on tax exemption for imported goods by the officials of National Board of Revenue (NBR) or unholy alliance of officials and contractors of railway and health directorate responsible for corruption.

Had the recommendations been implemented, the scope of corruption would have been narrowed, observed the ACC in its 2019 Annual Report.

Their appeals, however, have been going unheeded. To solve the problem, the ACC in its report, published yesterday, recommended giving the cabinet division the charge of evaluating and implementing its recommendations.

No corrupt person will be spared

Says HC

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The High Court yesterday warned that it will not spare any corrupt people no matter how powerful they are -- be it ministers or lawmakers.

Nobody is above the law, said the HC bench of Justice Md Nazrul Islam Talukder and Justice Mohi Uddin Shamim.

The court said this at the hearing of a petition from Shariful Islam Jinnah, Jatiya Party lawmaker from Bogura-2. The lawmaker sought anticipatory bail in a corruption case filed by the Anti-Corruption Commission for amassing wealth illegally and concealing wealth information.

Shariful's lawyer Sheikh Sirajul Islam told the HC bench that his client is a freedom fighter and is now 73. The corruption case was filed against him to tarnish his image and harm his dignity.

In response, the HC bench said it is not right that a lawmaker's dignity will be

FIX THE ERROR, not the mirror

SYED ASHFAQUL HAQUE

Just imagine a day without a mirror. You're getting ready for work, not knowing how you look. Your car, without rear-view mirrors, is on the busy road to office, negotiating the peak hour traffic. A girl is having her hairdo or makeup done before going out to meet friends, with no clue about her looks. A dentist tries to do a root canal job on a tooth deep inside a patient's mouth, basing on what he can see and what he can't. The outcome is obvious: a laughter or disaster.

It is impossible to live a life without a mirror. A tiny piece of glass, yet it turns out to be a true friend in our life, always helping us stay safe. It's rather a one-sided friendship that keeps us informed of the truth and do things right. We need a reflection in the mirror to find out the problems in our looks, dress, makeup and the way we carry ourselves. It indicates what errors need to be fixed and how.

Even if there is no flaw, we need our mirror to tell: "Go ahead and feel good". We just cannot think of a public appearance without a mirror vetting.

How do we react after finding faults in the reflection? We don't reject the reflection. We zero in on the wrong and get it right. We work on it till the mirror agrees with the fixing. No one wants to look funny, after all.

Who does not trust a mirror? Mirror is not devised to produce a deceiving image. It reflects as it is. Even the ugliest person on the planet keeps a mirror but doesn't say: "Oh no, it cannot be me or the mirror must be giving a wrong reflection to tarnish my image!"
